The Loran Scholars Foundation is a national charity working in partnership with universities, donors, and volunteers across the country to find and nurture young people in Canada who show strength of character and commitment to service, challenging them to realize their full potential. The foundation has been selecting and supporting thousands of exceptional young Canadians since 1988.

NOT SIMPLY A SCHOLARSHIP — WE INVEST IN OUR COLLECTIVE FUTURE

• We believe the potential of youth is found in their character. We look beyond a student’s transcript to find evidence of integrity, grit, and generosity of spirit.

• Our community selects and supports Loran Scholars to study in Canada, providing them with a breadth of opportunities to enrich their education, nurture their growth, and strengthen their capacity to become leaders in every sector who serve others and who take risks to create positive change.

• Together with 725 volunteers, 623 donors, 583 alumni, and 25 university partners, we invest in young people at a pivotal moment in their development, to the benefit of their future and ours.

('##) notes a Loran Scholar’s award year
Adithi Balaji never thought she would become a Loran Scholar, but the encouragement of her community compelled her to apply. “Loran isn’t just a scholarship,” she says, citing the award’s opportunities and support in addition to financial freedom. At National Selections, Adithi was surprised to meet youth who were united not in their accomplishments but in a warm, down-to-earth spirit. “These are people just like me, and maybe I’m not as much of an outsider as I thought,” she recalls realizing.

The newly selected class of 2020 navigated an unconventional start to their undergraduate journeys. After joining Loran’s virtual orientation and retreat, Adithi began her first year as a University of Victoria student from her hometown of Yellowknife. She discovered a passion for mathematics, which she changed her major to study, and moderated an online platform for first-year students to build community while apart.

A recurring theme in Adithi’s past year has been reflecting on how she can most meaningfully serve, asking herself “Where am I needed most?” and “What can I help with best?” Before the pandemic disrupted students’ plans across the country, Adithi had passed the torch of her high school roles to others. To re-engage with her community in a new light, she joined the Rainbow Coalition of Yellowknife, an LGBTQ+ outreach organization, as Programs, Events, and Social Media Coordinator for her first Loran summer work experience.

Adithi is looking forward to joining campus life in person at UVic to meet her peers, take classes, and get involved in the community. She feels supported knowing that, through Loran, she is surrounded by people who share her values. “That value system guides me and my decision-making.” Already, she remarks, “Loran has changed me as a person and how I view the world. It’s allowed me to dream a little bigger.”
Now, more than ever, we need to support youth who are curious, creative, and unafraid to pursue unconventional paths. Loran’s mission is to seek out young people who see problems as challenges to be addressed — and who have the boldness and perseverance to tackle them. We look for those who are humble, inquisitive, and thoughtful; who shun the status quo and bring others along; who will act in the face of injustices and build a better world for everyone. We believe Canada will thrive if we ensure that these high-potential students are given the opportunity to imagine, explore, and create the future.
The value of the Loran Award is realized through our comprehensive four-year leadership enrichment program; our network of mentors, volunteers, and donors; and the lifelong community of scholars and alumni we cultivate.

A Launchpad for Potential
We encourage Loran Scholars to discover how they can most effectively contribute wherever they go, over the course of their lifetimes, and to resist the temptation to take easy or conventional paths. Each Loran Scholar is granted a renewable four-year award valued at $100,000, comprising an annual $10,000 living stipend and a matching tuition waiver from one of our 25 partner universities. Scholars can access up to $14,000 in funding to build practical skills through summer work experiences in three sectors (enterprise, public policy, and community development). For guidance throughout their time in the program, scholars are paired with mentors who challenge them and introduce them to their new communities. Loran Scholars use these opportunities to broaden and enrich their academic studies and develop their leadership capabilities.

Rigorous and Comprehensive Selection Process
The Loran Award is not a reward for past accomplishments, but a long-term investment in potential. We search for young people who have the capacity to grow into the leaders of integrity we need. To select Loran Scholars, we look for qualities that marks alone cannot show: kindness, a breadth of interests and deep commitment to service, the courage to make difficult decisions, and the determination to work towards long-term goals. Through a unique assessment and interview process, we select up to 36 Loran Scholars from over 6,000 applicants. We also grant more than 100 one-time provincial/territorial and finalist awards annually.

Extensive Network
We understand the value of connection and relationships in supporting scholars’ future growth, and we welcome them into an extended family of volunteers, donors, staff, and past and present scholars. Incoming Loran Scholars forge strong bonds and prepare to enter university through our orientation program. All in-stream scholars participate in an annual four-day retreat, forums, and a transition program during their graduating year. Our alumni come together and collaborate through their own hubs and larger reunion events. The Loran network enables connections to be made across years and disciplines, and provides inspiration and motivation for our scholars.

LORAN, short for Long-Range Aid to Navigation, is a system that uses three points to determine one’s course for a long journey. The Loran Scholars Foundation identifies and supports young people who demonstrate our three core values: character, service, and leadership. Loran Scholars navigate future paths of high potential and impact, guided by these values.
In 2016, we articulated a bold strategic vision for the foundation: by 2021, we wanted our scholar program to be considered among the best in the world. We wanted to raise awareness of our brand, expanding our reach and increasing visibility — not only of our foundation, but of our scholars and alumni and the impact they are making in their communities and industries. Over the course of five years, we set out to increase alumni engagement with the foundation through the establishment of on-the-ground alumni hubs, as well as through our annual alumni fundraising campaigns. Finally, we committed to securing a long-term funding model and sustaining the growth of the foundation to support all of this work and continue to realize Loran’s mission to identify and support exceptional students whom we believe have the potential to change the world.

When this ambitious 2016 - 2021 vision for the Loran Scholars Foundation was drafted, little did we know we would find ourselves, five years later, in the midst of a pandemic: a paradigm-shifting event that had the potential to disrupt our success and stall our progress.

And yet, looking back on this final year of our strategic plan, we are thrilled to report that in all four priority areas we exceeded expectations and are now poised to face our post-COVID future from a position of organizational strength and with a renewed sense of urgency to identify the young people who will lead us through future challenges.

Ensuring a world-class program through selections & scholar stewardship: Over the course of five years, we have expanded our network of selections committees and grown our volunteer network to be able to process the more than 6,000 applications we now receive annually from young people across the country. That we were able to seamlessly transform our 2020-2021 selections process to an online channel is a testament to the rigour and care that have always gone into our search for each new scholar cohort. We have not only increased the amount of funding we invest in Loran Scholars, finalists, and provincial/territorial award recipients, but we have also focused on deepening the value of the four-year comprehensive leadership enrichment program we offer. We’ve added a fourth-year transition program, extended supports for mental health, dedicated training in equity-centred leadership, and expanded opportunities for peer-to-peer learning and connection with the wider Loran community, many of which were realized as we transitioned our 2021 programming to a virtual environment.

Alumni engagement: We now keep our past scholars connected to each other, to our scholars, and to the foundation through a number of different channels. Having already established 11 local alumni hubs in Canada, the US, and the UK, we drew new inspiration from the realities of this past year — adding a global hub for alumni abroad to keep in touch virtually, launching a new digital alumni platform, and hosting our first-ever online alumni reunion. The strength of the alumni community’s connection to our mission was evidenced by a surge of financial support this year: alumni increased their donations by more than 15%, raising more than $206K – a 39% increase from their 2016 giving levels. The generous endowment matching we receive from the McCall MacBain Foundation for alumni giving further bolsters this commitment.

Awareness: Since 2016, we have focused our marketing and community outreach efforts on expanding our reach to ensure that as many young people and educators as possible know about the opportunities we provide to students with the desire to make a difference. Having established an online application and selection system in 2016, and with record-breaking application numbers in each successive year, we have grown our online and media presence by incorporating the voices of scholars and alumni into our storytelling as we spread the word across Canada. Now, even more Canadians are aware of the Loran Award, its transformative opportunities for students, and the ripple effect that is realized when we invest in the leadership journeys of these promising young students.
Funding: In 2016, we set an ambitious goal for ourselves to diversify our donor base and raise a total of $20.3M to secure Loran’s future financial stability. With a loyal base of more than 600 donors, and despite a year of economic instability, we were able to surpass our annual fundraising goal which subsequently enabled us to exceed our five-year strategic fundraising target by almost 10%, raising close to $22.3M. We are tremendously grateful to all of you who demonstrate your trust in our work through your investment. Further, we deeply value the strong relationships we have with our 25 Canadian university partners who co-invest in Loran Scholars through tuition waivers that match the living stipends we provide. In 2021 this amount totalled more than one million dollars. Without these sources of financial support we could not help Loran Scholars realize their potential.

Over the course of a year in which the character of leaders has been put to the test through unprecedented social, economic, and environmental disruptions; when we have all been called to prioritize the greater good and think of others before ourselves; and when we have seen communities join together to support one another through selfless acts of service, the values of Loran have resonated more strongly than ever before.

Thanks to your dedication, your generosity, and your fundamental belief in the potential of youth with the capacity to be the service-minded leaders we need, we are now able to turn our attention to developing a new strategic vision that will support Loran’s future evolution. Although we cannot predict what the next five years will bring, we know we can rely on the boundless optimism and determination of Loran Scholars to leave the world better than they found it.
THE LORAN SCHOLAR JOURNEY

Loran is a community project supported by three pillars — donors, volunteers, and university partners — who share our collective vision and who are dedicated to lifelong service and leadership. Each year, they uphold our ability to search the country for each cohort of Loran Scholars. Supported by this community, scholars develop their leadership capacity through a comprehensive four-year enrichment program before joining an engaged network of alumni who, in turn, give back within and beyond the Loran community as donors, volunteers, and leaders.

A global pandemic can’t stop us.
If anything, it has underscored our need for innovative, civic-minded youth to lead us into the future. We believe that building a better future for us all starts with our young people, and that investing in them catalyzes a ripple effect that will be felt across Canadian society.
Traditionally, our incoming class embarks on an orientation expedition and we bring in-stream scholars together for an annual retreat and our national scholars’ forum. In 2020-2021, due to COVID-19, we proactively expanded our virtual programming and coaching to ensure continuous support and dynamic learning experiences for scholars.

Amidst the challenges and constraints of the past year, it has been the strength of the Loran network that has seen us through. Not wanting physical distancing restrictions and travel bans to disrupt our ability to gather, we held our first virtual National Community Celebration on March 25, 2021 with more than 300 past and present scholars, volunteers, donors, and university representatives. Together, we joined online to celebrate the graduating class of 2017, officially welcomed the first-year class of 2020 into our community, and were inspired by keynotes from The Right Honourable Adrienne Clarkson (former Governor General of Canada) and Geeta Sankappanavar (founder and CEO of Akira Impact). After a six-month virtual selections process, we were also thrilled to unveil the newest cohort of Loran Scholars in the company of our online guests, who offered their hearty congratulations from near and far.

The pandemic has underscored the importance and value of a strong and connected community. Whether online or in person, we ensure scholars leave each experience with a renewed sense of purpose and belonging, and commitment to character, service, and leadership.
2020-2021 VIRTUAL PROGRAMMING

Orientation Expedition
Before beginning university in the fall, our orientation expedition encourages incoming scholars to step outside of their comfort zones, take risks, persevere through challenges, and bond as a cohort. Sharing this first experience as Loran Scholars marks the start of their undergraduate journeys and fosters team-building and personal growth. In 2020, our first-year orientation spanned two months, offering virtual opportunities for the class of 2020 to get to know one another and prepare for the experiences to come in Loran’s program.

Scholars’ Retreat
As a gathering place before each new academic year, our annual retreat provides space for leadership development, reflection, and social connection, to help scholars resume their studies feeling energized and inspired. From August 1 to September 1, 2020, we held our first-ever virtual retreat, supported by RBC Future Launch. Through more than 47 online events and sessions, scholars shared in professional and soft skill-building, peer-to-peer learning and support, scholar- and alumni-led panels, and external presentations — including a mandatory, facilitated training on Anti-Black Racism and Equity-Centred Leadership. Despite missing the in-person opportunity, a benefit of this online retreat was the ability to record retreat sessions and create a digital library of resources for scholars to reference throughout the year.

Fourth-Year Transition Program
Our fourth-year transition program is designed to help the graduating class navigate their final year of undergraduate studies and encourage them to make bold choices about their next steps in the years to come. In August 2020, over six different time zones, fourth-year scholars participated in online workshops, panels, and one-on-one career conversations with speakers and transition coaches from across the country — including 23 Loran alumni. The program continued throughout the year to help scholars make decisions during this critical time in their growth, and culminated in February at our online fourth-year Scholars’ Forum.

Scholars’ Forum
Our annual forum supports first- and fourth-year scholars in pathfinding, planning, and preparing for their future endeavours. The newest and graduating classes learn from peers, alumni, and community leaders through panels and discussions, and receive résumé support from volunteer human resources specialists from BMO Capital Markets. On February 6 and 7, 2021, our virtual forum provided an important opportunity for the classes of 2020 and 2017 to reconnect amidst the challenges faced over the past year. Seven sessions offered insights into summer planning, working remotely, authentic networking, assessing community needs for meaningful service, and post-graduation decision-making. At our inaugural fireside chat, we were also delighted to host Senator Ratna Omidvar, Graham Fox (’93), and Maya Fernandez (’08) for a conversation about careers in public policy.
Patrick David
1999 Loran Scholar
Integration Lead, Product Acceleration & Corporate Development, Shopify

“Loran afforded me the opportunity to find my true self,” says Patrick David. Becoming a scholar gave him the freedom to explore how to live authentically at an early stage. The award held immense meaning for both him and his parents, who emigrated to Canada from the Philippines in search of a better life for their family. “It validated their decision to come to Canada and raise their children here,” he explains. “They took that risk and it paid off.”

Today, Patrick stays closely connected with the foundation and his fellow alumni. He gives back as a donor and helps young people on their journeys as a volunteer assessor, interviewer, coach, and presenter. Meeting candidates and current scholars is a “bright light” in his year. “It reminds me about my commitment as an alumnus to lead, serve, and be the best version of myself.” Interviewing with Loran also enriches Patrick’s professional work in corporate development at Shopify, and builds on his experience in executive recruitment. In his career, community, and service with Loran, he continually reflects on his core values by asking “How can we make things better?” and “How do we measure success?”

Patrick believes that Canada needs steady leadership grounded in integrity and consistency. He hopes the next generation will lead “with intention and with care,” and strive for long-term impact. In a digital age increasingly characterized by disconnection and short-term results, Patrick adds, Loran offers a rare antidote by cultivating “the deep relationships we need to bring others along and converge on ideas.” In the Loran community, he’s found “supportive people who exemplify these values and raise others up. That’s important work.”

LIVING LORAN

Wherever their paths lead them, Loran Scholars share a lifelong commitment to leaving things better than they found them. Although the average age of our alumni is only 32, they go above and beyond to take risks, help others, and find solutions as emerging leaders in every sector.

This habit of giving back is part of the fabric of our alumni community. Alumni serve as volunteers in their own communities and with Loran, helping us select and interview each new class of scholars and acting as mentors and coaches to support them on their journeys. They also ensure the foundation’s success by financially reinvesting in our mission each year. Our annual alumni campaign is a significant contribution to the foundation and an important measure of how deeply committed alumni are to providing opportunities for future generations of scholars. This past year, 78% of alumni donated to the campaign and all gifts were generously matched dollar-for-dollar by the McCall MacBain Foundation as a contribution to our endowment.

Our network of alumni hubs connect scholars locally and globally through social, professional, and service-oriented gatherings. As the Loran alumni population grows, almost doubling by 2027, the hubs serve as intimate networks that support alumni as they contribute their talents to Canada and the world.

96% of alumni have donated a cumulative total of more than $2.17 million to the foundation.

Over the weekend of September 18–20, we hosted our quadrennial alumni reunion, Connexion 2020. For the first time ever, it was delivered virtually, bringing together Loran alumni from 24 cohorts. Alumni logged in from all over the world to reconnect, share, and learn from one another’s experiences through engaging presentations, panels, and keynotes. With 13 sessions led by 40+ speakers, and workshops including a Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Lab as well as a two-day training in Public Narrative, these conversations highlighted the power of community and the importance of turning values into action to create a better world.
DEVELOPING CITIZENS OF IMPACT

Loran alumni are giving back to their communities, pushing boundaries, and contributing to a more diverse leadership ecosystem in such fields as technology, the arts, finance, medicine, law, and science. Though their work spans a multitude of sectors and disciplines throughout Canada and the world, alumni share and continue to be guided by Loran’s core values of character, service, and leadership.

An entrepreneur and a physician by training, Jeeshan Chowdhury (RBC Loran Scholar ‘00) is the Founder & CEO of Journey Colab. Part of the inaugural cohort backed by the Apollo Projects Fund, the startup’s mission is to develop FDA-approved psychedelic treatments, decolonize drug development, and transform mental healthcare. Before his most recent project, Jeeshan co-founded Y Combinator-backed startup Listrunner — now Desma Health — a digital health platform to help clinicians securely share patient information. As a Sauvé Scholar, he co-founded Hacking Health, a global movement to foster health technology innovations. Jeeshan completed his MD/DPhil at the University of Alberta and the University of Oxford, where he studied as a Rhodes Scholar. He was a member of the Joule Innovation Council, a select group of innovators and business leaders recognized for supporting physician-led innovation. Jeeshan has shared his experiences with in-stream scholars by presenting, most recently, at Loran’s 2021 Scholars’ Forum.

Based in Sackville, NB, Amy-Lee Kouwenberg (W. Garfield Weston Loran Scholar ‘01) has dedicated her career to conservation and science. A Bird Project Biologist at Birds Canada, she recently served as the organization’s Acting Director for the Atlantic Region. Through her work, Amy-Lee coordinates the High Elevation Landbird Program, monitoring birds in remote forests of northern New Brunswick and the Cape Breton Highlands, and works with forestry officials to protect habitat in the industrial forest. She also coordinates the Atlantic Nocturnal Owl Survey, a citizen scientist-based effort to census owls in the Atlantic provinces. Widely published for her studies on seabirds, Amy-Lee previously worked as an Aquatic Science Biologist for Fisheries and Oceans Canada and as a Wildlife Technician and Biologist for Environment Canada. She studied Agriculture at the University of Guelph before earning her MSc and PhD in Cognitive and Behavioural Ecology from Memorial University of Newfoundland. Amy-Lee has volunteered with Loran’s selections since 2007.
Marin MacLeod (Young Fund Loran Scholar ’09) works at the intersection of public health, innovation, and knowledge translation. As Executive Director of the Reach Alliance, she leads strategic planning and manages stakeholder relations with Reach’s global partnership community. The research initiative, based at the University of Toronto’s Munk School of Global Affairs & Public Policy and supported by the Mastercard Center for Inclusive Growth, examines how critical interventions and innovations reach those who are the hardest to reach and most in need. With a background in program design, delivery, and evaluation, Marin’s career has led her to work across a range of public health issues in several countries. She holds a BA (Hons) from Queen’s University and a Master in Public Health from the University of Toronto’s Dalla Lana School of Public Health. Marin gives back to Loran as an assessor, summer program employer and coach, and alumni hub coordinator.

Rebecca Gill (Simmonds Family Loran Scholar ’07) is a criminal defence lawyer practicing in Abbotsford, BC, at Dhanu Dhaliwal Law Group. An experienced trial lawyer, she assists marginalized communities in accessing and navigating the complexities of the justice system. Rebecca’s commitment to defending those in need is a natural extension of her time spent championing issues related to police accountability, anti-poverty, social housing, and employment standards. In addition to supporting Loran as an assessor, interviewer, panelist, and alumni campaign fundraiser, Rebecca volunteers with the Fraser Valley Criminal Law Association and the Abbotsford Restorative Justice and Advocacy Association. She also acts as ad-hoc counsel for the Community Legal Assistance Society during Mental Health Act Review Panel Hearings, and provides independent legal advice to survivors of sexual assault. While studying law at the University of Victoria, Rebecca participated in the Law Centre Program and offered legal assistance to clients in financial need.

Charles Larson (W. Garfield Weston Loran Scholar ’03) is a pediatric cardiac intensivist at the Stollery Children’s Hospital in Edmonton, AB, as well as a University of Alberta clinical assistant professor in pediatrics and program director of pediatric critical care. Charles led his U of A team to start The 3D Heart Project, which prints models of pediatric patients’ hearts and uses technology to provide a powerful educational tool for young patients and their families. At the height of the pandemic, the team shifted its focus to design and 3D print more than 2,000 reusable face shields for use in healthcare settings, in partnership with Alberta Health Services. Charles studied medicine at McGill University and completed his residency at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto. Named one of Edify Edmonton’s Top 40 Under 40 in 2020, he serves as a Loran selections volunteer and mentors a current scholar.
WE BELIEVE THAT A YOUNG PERSON’S CHARACTER IS A BETTER INDICATOR OF POTENTIAL THAN STANDARD ACADEMIC MEASURES. OUR RIGOROUS SELECTION PROCESS INCLUDES A WRITTEN ASSESSMENT, AS WELL AS INDIVIDUAL AND PANEL INTERVIEWS WITH A DIVERSE GROUP OF COMMUNITY-ENGAGED LORAN VOLUNTEERS. THIS PROCESS ALLOWS AMPLE OPPORTUNITY FOR SELF-REFLECTION AND AUTHENTIC CONVERSATION.

To find these young people, we enlist the help of guidance counsellors and teachers at approximately 3,500 high schools and Cegeps across the country. They recommend candidates who demonstrate strength of character, commitment to service in the community, and leadership potential. In addition, over half of our candidates apply independently through the direct pool.

This year, 400+ Loran volunteers rose to a unique challenge: reviewing more than 6,000 applications, getting to know hundreds of youth across the country, and creating meaningful interview experiences for them at a distance. Our first-ever virtual selections — executed with the support of “Zoom operators” Lindsey Li (10) and Braden Lamoureux (16) — were only possible with our volunteers’ expertise, adaptability, and steadfast dedication to identifying the special qualities found in Loran Scholars. We are grateful for their support in a year when warm and insightful human connections were so important.

Dr. Sheiry Dhillon, MD, DPhil
2008 W. Garfield Weston Loran Scholar

Mentoring with Loran has been a full-circle experience for Dr. Sheiry Dhillon. A physician based in Toronto, she remembers developing a strong sense of community as a 2008 scholar. After benefiting as a mentee herself, Sheiry has paid it forward as a mentor over the last four years.

While her perspective as an alumna has given her a window into the Loran Scholar journey, “mentorship taps into a different skill set,” she emphasizes. “It’s about what the mentee needs and how you can support that.”

To Sheiry, the role of a mentor is to provide a “safe, non-judgmental space for the mentee to turn to and discuss challenges, hesitations, and hard questions.”

Sheiry and her mentee Parnika Godkhindi built their relationship on empathy from shared lived experiences, including their studies at McMaster University. “I really wanted to create a space for her where she could talk about anything - what’s important to her,” Sheiry says. “I ask questions and share reflections, and in that process I hope there’s growth.” Reciprocally, learning from Parnika keeps Sheiry close to the ground and facilitates her own growth.

Mentoring as an alumna, Sheiry believes, is a rewarding way to “keep your Loran journey going and give back to the community by thoughtfully being involved in a mentee’s life.” Sheiry also stays in touch through a variety of volunteer capacities: “It’s an easy decision, whenever anyone from the Loran community reaches out and asks if I want to get involved. The award was transformative for me and set the stage for extremely meaningful relationships in my life. Being a mentor reinforces that in one more way.”

I am really grateful for my relationship with Sheiry. Her insights and support guided me through important self-reflection during some of the toughest moments of my undergrad, enabling me to lead and learn with intention.

Parnika Godkhindi, 2017 Ralph M. Barford Loran Scholar
One of our greatest assets is our national network of mentors who embody the values of Loran and encourage our scholars to do the same. Since 1996, our one-on-one mentorship program has involved 535 mentors representing a breadth of professional and volunteer interests. Mentors commit to sharing their experiences and networks with the scholars through their four years of undergraduate study.

Through our tri-sectoral summer program, scholars expand their understanding of their local and global communities and how they can use their talents in a professional context. Summer work experiences augment academic studies and can take place in Canada and abroad. With access to Loran’s networks and up to $14,000 in funding for their three summers, scholars build practical skills and gain hands-on experience in the public, private, and non-profit sectors.

Each student becomes familiar with policy creation during their public policy summer, explores grassroots non-profit work in their community development summer, and develops their capacity to work in a for-profit environment through their enterprise summer. Despite restrictions on in-person work, for the summer of 2020, in-stream scholars persevered to secure meaningful remote-based opportunities across all three sectors.

Jérémie Bedard (Dobson Loran Scholar ’17), who grew up in Québec, QC, recently graduated from Queen’s University with a bachelor’s degree in Computer Science and Commerce — but that’s not all. He brings to his early career a breadth of experiences from three summers supporting initiatives in economic empowerment, multilateral relations, and entrepreneurship.

“My summers were fantastically complementary,” Jérémie begins. “Each summer was beneficial for the one that followed, which I didn’t expect.” Looking back, he sees a distinct lesson from each experience. “My first summer pushed me outside of my comfort zone,” he reflects. Before moving to Cali, Colombia, in 2018, Jérémie spent two months studying Spanish to ensure he could productively work in the language. As Tech Lead with Proyecto
Ludicamente, he met with school children to better understand their needs in order to build a platform for them to learn about mental health. From this community development summer, Jérémie carried forward a deep appreciation for the humility, empathy, and learning mindset needed when spending time in another country.

In Paris, where he spent his 2019 public policy summer with the Delegation for Francophone and Multilateral Affairs of Quebec, “it clicked that every sector is interrelated,” Jérémie notes. As a project manager, he gained insight into multilateral relationships and led consultations to update a multi-state economic strategy focusing on digital innovation and entrepreneurship in French-speaking African nations. “I quickly realized that in high-level public policy, you can’t perform much change without people leading initiatives at the grassroots level — and that’s what I was part of in my previous summer. Having that perspective really helped me in identifying people to help make this strategy a reality.”

Jérémie’s professional and personal development crystallized during his enterprise summer in 2020 at Diagram Ventures in Montréal — the culmination of his tri-sectoral experience. “It brought together everything I had learned throughout my undergraduate studies and my previous summers.” After interning with Diagram through Loran’s summer program before completing his final year at Queen’s, Jérémie returned to the venture studio’s innovation team as a full-time analyst. He continues to apply his unique combination of skills and perspectives, leading user interviews — something he first practiced in Colombia — and building prototypes to validate and advance entrepreneurial ideas.

Even for those pursuing a technical field, like him, Jérémie considers it an advantage to take a less conventional and direct path. “Exploring different avenues prepares you well to eventually find what you really want to do,” he says. “I don’t regret a single second. The tri-sectoral summers, for me, were the most valuable portion of the entire program.” To those students just beginning their Loran journeys, he advises: “Trust the process and enjoy the ride.”
Although our traditional summer work experience program was disrupted in 2020 due to the pandemic, 48 scholars secured work opportunities in policy, community-based, and private sector roles. We are grateful for the continued support of our summer employment partners in creating such valuable learning experiences.

PUBLIC POLICY

Léa Papillon (McCall MacBain Loran Scholar ’18)

Intern, Pembina Institute, Vancouver, BC

“My experience opened my eyes to the importance of bridging the gap between government and scientific research and communications. I learned about the background research and strategy it takes to improve public policy, and found that the sector involves more of my interests than I had ever imagined. Working with the Buildings and Urban Solutions Team, I gained a new critical lens that will help me better analyze and address the environmental impacts from a building’s architectural characteristics. I also saw the value of think tanks bringing together professionals from diverse fields and backgrounds, which encouraged my desire to gain different job experiences and follow an uncommon path.”
COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

Blair Crawford (Young Fund Loran Scholar ‘17)
Evaluation and Project Specialist, Engage Nova Scotia, Halifax, NS

“Over the course of the summer, I produced an evaluation framework for the Nova Scotia Quality of Life Initiative as well as a toolkit which will be used internally to ensure that assessment of the initiative is conducted effectively. I am proud of this work as it required me to apply my educational knowledge of monitoring and evaluation to a real-life project — and see its role in the non-profit sector firsthand. Through producing the framework, I was able to develop a robust understanding of different approaches, and I was challenged to allow different ideas to expand my own views. This experience has shaped the way in which I will view project evaluation moving forward and has inspired me to continue on that path.”

ENTERPRISE

Kieran Cyphus (Connor, Clark & Lunn Loran Scholar ‘17)
Software Engineering Intern, Common Wealth, Toronto, ON

“Because Common Wealth has such a clear and applicable mission — to give every Canadian access to retirement — I was given a chance to go deep and explore the complexity that exists within modern applications, something which isn’t possible within the time constraints of an academic degree. My work focused on developing the annuity flow within the existing web application, making key contributions to the frontend and backend codebases. It was rewarding to be one of the first new hires on a small team of very accomplished engineers. My supervisors mentored me on not only technical aspects and industry best practices but also tech leadership, so I left with a better understanding of the retirement industry as well as professional software development as a whole.”
The first thing Kim Echlin will tell you about Loran is that it began with people: a community of welcoming and collaborative individuals who prioritize values over success, and focus on long-term growth. “As a people-based organization, grassroots work tends to blossom into bigger endeavours,” Kim observes.

A founding trustee and one of the foundation’s first volunteers, Kim has co-authored Loran’s story since its origin. Since first meeting Bob Cluett as a graduate student, Kim has helped to select decades of cohorts as an interviewer and shared her gifts as a mentor. Through her many pivotal roles, Kim has found that “at each juncture of an evolving life, there are evolving opportunities at the foundation.” She appreciates how “Loran’s core principles have remained stable” — even over more than 30 years — but also “expanded to embrace the changes in our Canadian character.”

“As a National Co-Chair, I see the interests of students across the country, and how those have changed over the years. The skill sets they bring will be the bedrock of new directions in Canadian society.” While interviewing, Kim looks for “the young student who is generous and curious, and who wants to give back to their community,” she explains. “There’s also a fundamental optimism in excellent leaders. They see ways of doing things that will benefit everyone.”

Kim believes that returning to shared principles is a powerful antidote to increasing polarization: “It matters more than ever today that a group with Loran’s values is actively out in the community.” Her vantage point as a long-time supporter gives her hope. Volunteering with Loran is “contributing to society in a way that will endure through decades,” Kim reflects. “The investment in our young people is unmatchable. Give a little bit of time, and you’ll see the effects through a generation.”

725 individuals volunteer with the foundation

Our 400+ selections volunteers donate over 9,800 hours to select each class of Loran Scholars

42% of alumni serve as Loran volunteers
Our work selecting and stewarding scholars to realize their potential relies upon a network of dedicated volunteers who assess and interview candidates, support scholars, and serve on our board. Volunteers come from a variety of careers and backgrounds, and demonstrate in their own lives the very values we look for in Loran Scholars.

Thank you to the 725 individuals who collectively gave over 12,700 hours of their time this past year. We are grateful for their generosity and belief in making long-term investments in young Canadians who demonstrate strength of character, a commitment to service, and the potential to be future leaders.

Every effort is made to ensure the accuracy of this report. If, however, we have made any errors or omitted a name, please accept our sincere apologies and contact info@loranscholar.ca for corrections.

As generous supporters of philanthropic educational organizations, Claude Généreux and Myriam Legault share a fundamental belief in the responsibility of giving back. To them, Loran’s vision makes a “compelling case” for donors. “If you care about education and leadership,” Claude explains, “Loran is unique because it looks beyond academics for what could be, as opposed to markers of success already realized.”

Myriam’s career as an educator and Claude’s background in leadership development led the couple to help elevate the next generation. Over six years, they have supported Loran not only financially but also as volunteer mentors and interviewers, in addition to Claude’s service on the foundation’s board and investment committee.

Claude and Myriam identify Loran’s multi-faceted program, and its positioning as a bridge between high school and university, as differentiators. “Investing early in youth with potential helps them create and paint on their own canvases,” Myriam shares. “To give a young person the opportunity to realize what they can do might lead to something greater than you could have imagined.”

Claude believes Loran’s emphasis on core values has always been ahead of its time, observing a world in need of leadership that won’t compromise on character. Now is the time, he says, to invest in high-potential students who will become values-based leaders prepared to take on challenges for the collective good.

Giving to Loran offers Claude and Myriam a source of energy and hope for the future, and they envision a lasting ripple effect: “The program already has the promise of transforming Canada in the next 30 years, and it’s a great tribute to the vision that was there in the beginning.”
OUR PARTNERS
INVESTING IN POTENTIAL

Each year, the Loran Scholars Foundation benefits from the support of hundreds of individuals, companies, and foundations aligned with our mission of investing in young people who demonstrate character, service, and leadership potential. We thank those listed below for their financial contributions in support of our mission.

M indicates a monthly donor.

Every effort is made to ensure the accuracy of this report. If, however, we have made any errors or omitted a name, please accept our sincere apologies and contact info@loranscholar.ca for corrections.

The Loran Scholars Foundation established an endowment fund in 2008 to provide our donors with a means of making an enduring gift in support of promising young Canadians. One of our long-term goals is to fund a proportion of our annual expenditures from income earned on invested capital. As an organization, we are committed to contributing to this endowment as well, from our net surplus, to invest in our future financial stability as a foundation. The fund, holding $13.8M as of April 30, 2021 is managed by Burgundy Asset Management and overseen by a volunteer committee struck by our board of directors.

We are grateful to the McCall MacBain Foundation for its 1:1 alumni donation matching commitment to our endowment.
Loran has grown its asset base with a primary aim of ensuring that the foundation has sufficient funds to meet its future obligations to all in-stream scholars and can continue to meet its goals to increase funding opportunities for exceptional students each year. To help achieve this, our investment funds are professionally managed in a balanced portfolio.

We encourage you to review our audited financial statements, available at www.loranscholar.ca. Below is summarized financial information for the year ended April 30, 2021.

STAFF

The foundation’s CEO, Meghan Moore (416.646.2120 x 222, meghan.moore@loranscholar.ca) is a member of the class of 1998. As of April 30, 2021, the staff team comprised 15 individuals, including 3 alumni and the Cluett Fellow, Yasmina Male ('16).
We’re in search of young Canadians with integrity, compassion, and courage — the future community helpers, movement makers, and civic-minded risk-takers.

We work to identify and support talented students who show sparks of leadership potential and strong commitment to service.

Together with our volunteers, donors, and Canadian university partners, we are investing in our collective future.
