

INVESTING in POTENTIAL

CHARACTER • SERVICE • LEADERSHIP

The Loran Scholars Foundation is a national charity working in partnership with universities, donors, and volunteers across the country to find and nurture young Canadians who show strength of character and commitment to service, challenging them to realize their full potential.

NOT SIMPLY A SCHOLARSHIP – WE INVEST IN OUR COLLECTIVE FUTURE

- We look beyond a student’s marks to find evidence of integrity, determination, compassion, resilience, and a strong sense of inner direction.
- Our extensive network of 616 volunteers, 637 donors, and 527 alumni supports and enhances each Loran Scholar’s growth, and amplifies their effect on the communities they serve.
- We believe our country needs unconventional leaders in every sector. We fund Loran Scholars to study in Canada and provide them with a breadth of opportunities to enrich their education, so they re-invest their talents in tackling our most complex problems and shaping Canada’s future.

Since 1988, the Loran Scholars Foundation has been selecting and supporting thousands of exceptional young Canadians.

Loran Scholars make a difference

Taron Topham (Cronin Loran Scholar ‘19) University of Saskatchewan

Coming from the small farming community of Grandview, MB, Taron Topham recognizes that becoming a Loran Scholar and moving to the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon opened doors he never knew existed. “If I’d stayed in my home province, I wouldn’t necessarily have pushed my boundaries,” he says. “Being in a different situation encouraged me to switch from a Bachelor of Science to Nursing.”

As a first-year scholar, Taron quickly tapped into the welcoming campus and community. He was involved with a Special Olympics fundraiser, joined an inter-faculty agriculture club, and played recreational hockey. He also volunteered at The Student Wellness Initiative Towards Community Health (SWITCH), a student-run non-profit clinic.

When the pandemic brought him home to Grandview, Taron remotely completed his public policy summer. Working with Dr. Terry Bennett (‘94) at The Offord Centre for Child Studies, a research institute focused on child and youth mental health, exposed him to the role that different sectors play in improving healthcare outcomes.

For Taron, it has been most meaningful to join “a family from coast to coast to coast that I’m proud to be a part of” and “a network that pushes me to be the best version of myself.” He says that the Loran community’s support gives him the freedom to pursue more than academic success, to explore and gain new skills and confidence, and to be surrounded by people who share and affirm his values:

“Character, service, leadership come from within,” he reflects. “They help get you through both the troubling times and the times when you’re on top of the world.”

INVESTING IN THE GREATEST OF CANADA'S NATURAL RESOURCES: OUR YOUTH

LORAN, short for Long-Range Aid to Navigation, is a system that uses three points to determine one's course for a long journey. The Loran Scholars Foundation identifies and supports young people who demonstrate our three core values: character, service, and leadership. Loran Scholars navigate future paths of high potential, guided by these values.

The heart of our work is in finding and nurturing young people who are unafraid to challenge the status quo, who are insatiably curious, and who want to contribute to a brighter tomorrow. We believe Canada will thrive if we ensure that these high-potential students are given the opportunity to imagine, explore, and create the future.

Long-Term Investment in Potential

Loran Scholars are provided with a launchpad to realize their potential as future leaders for Canada. We encourage scholars to resist the temptation to take easy or conventional paths and to seek out meaningful ways to contribute to Canadian society. Each Loran Scholar is granted a renewable four-year award valued at $100,000, comprising an annual $10,000 living stipend and a matching tuition waiver from one of our 25 partner universities. Scholars are provided with up to $10,000 in funding for three scholar-initiated summers (in enterprise, public policy, and community development) facilitating practical tri-sectoral experience. For guidance throughout their time in the program, scholars are paired with mentors who challenge them and introduce them to their new communities. Loran Scholars use these opportunities to broaden and enrich their academic studies and develop their leadership capabilities.

Rigorous and Comprehensive Selection Process

We search for young people who have the capacity to grow into leaders who can see us through future challenges. To select Loran Scholars, we look for qualities that a transcript alone cannot show: personal integrity and character; commitment to service and an entrepreneurial spirit; breadth in academic and extracurricular interests; strongly developed inner-directedness; and outstanding overall potential for leadership. Through a series of assessments and interviews providing opportunity for reflection, we select up to 36 Loran Scholars from over 5,000 applicants. We also grant more than 100 one-time entrance awards to provincial/territorial and national finalists annually.

Extensive Network

We understand the value of connection and relationships for supporting scholars' future successes, and we welcome them into an extended family of volunteers, donors, staff, and past and present scholars. Incoming Loran Scholars forge strong bonds by spending seven days together in Algonquin Park as part of an orientation expedition before beginning university. All in-stream scholars participate in an annual four-day retreat, forums, and a transition program during their graduating year. Our alumni come together and collaborate through their own regional hubs and larger reunion events. The Loran network enables connections to be made across years and disciplines and provides inspiration and motivation for our scholars.

THE LORAN COMMUNITY, GATHERING AT NATIONAL SELECTIONS IN FEBRUARY 2020

THE YEAR IN REVIEW

A MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR AND CEO

In 1988, our founder Bob Cluett envisioned a world where students were evaluated not based on their transcripts, but on an unconventional measure that signaled their true potential: one that was grounded in who they were as a person, what unique capabilities and curiosities they brought to the table, and what they made of the set of opportunities they were given in life. More than what they did, Bob was interested in why they did it—how they chose to invest their time in their communities and the source of their motivation. He sought to recognize youth who showed kindness and grit, who led from a place of authenticity rooted in their own values, and who were driven to improve the situation for others, not just themselves.

And so Bob set out to build the world he wanted. He joined forces with nine other trustees, established a network of volunteers to help identify and select students, and brought on board five university partners to co-invest in our first cohort of four Loran Scholars.

More than three decades later, that very model, founded on the generous contributions of our present network of 600+ donors, 25 university partners, and more than 600 volunteers, underpins our work of seeking out the young people who are ready to build their leadership capacity as Loran Scholars and dedicated to reinvesting their talents to benefit the collective good.

At the time of writing, we find ourselves in the midst of a global pandemic: a paradigm-shifting event that has underlined not only the inequities that exist in Canadian society, but also the courage of others to serve in the presence of great risk and the indispensability of community—even amidst physical distancing.

Against this backdrop, our mission of finding the next generation of young people who will be unafraid to tackle our future challenges is ever more important. The experiences they have over the course of their four years as Loran Scholars equip them with broadened perspectives to seek solutions at the intersections of industries and disciplines, a deeper understanding of their responsibility to step up when others won't, and greater capacity to lead through uncertainty.

Our 2019/20 year (May 1, 2019 – April 30, 2020), which this annual report covers, started very differently than it ended. Last summer our in-stream scholars travelled to 19 different countries on five continents to expand their skill sets in one of three industries (public policy, community development, enterprise). In August 2019 we welcomed our cohort of 35 incoming 2019 scholars and sent them on our annual Outward Bound expedition in Algonquin Park to forge unbreakable bonds by pushing themselves out of their comfort zones in the wilderness. Beginning a new cycle with the help of more than 400 selections volunteers, we welcomed 380 exceptional students—out of 5,194 applicants—to in-person interviews in 24 different regions across the country. In early February 2020 we brought 88 finalists to our National Selections in Toronto, where we identified our newest 36 Loran Scholars – the class of 2020 – our largest cohort yet.

The next month, as well all know, our world changed drastically.

It is a testament to the committed and long-range view of our donor community that we, as a not-for-profit foundation, have fared so well despite the fiscal uncertainty that the COVID-19 pandemic has brought. Although at year-end, Loran's investments, like everyone else's, were suffering, we have rebounded as of the time of writing, making up the investment loss we incurred in FY2020. Thanks to the generosity of our community of donors, we raised a record $3.77M, putting us in good stead to realize our strategic goal of generating $20.3M for the foundation by 2021.

The same resilience and commitment to giving back is present in our network of Loran alumni.

Over the course of this pandemic we have watched as many Loran alumni have stepped up to help their communities weather these challenging times, from serving on the front lines in healthcare and raising funds for PPE, to advocating for better supports for marginalized populations and developing innovative solutions to support our efforts to flatten the curve. Alumni also came together to support in-stream scholars facing extenuating circumstances due to the pandemic, dedicating a portion of the $178,000 raised in our alumni campaign to a COVID-19 Scholar Emergency Fund. Our 527 alumni are living examples of the long-term value of the investments we make in Loran Scholars. Their dedication to leading with integrity and serving others is a testament to Bob's original vision.

Although the pages of this annual report reflect our 2019/20 activities which connected exceptional students with one another, for the balance of this year we have turned our focus to keeping our community safe. The work of the Loran team has centered on reimagining how to cultivate community online and take advantage of digital channels to enrich our programming. As our in-stream scholars embrace their new post-secondary reality, they draw on the grit, resilience, and ingenuity that were identified in them when they were first named Loran Scholars.

As we collectively navigate our way out of this pandemic, we find hope in the optimism, determination, creativity, and service-orientation of our Loran Scholars, alumni, and community. We are deeply grateful to all of you who enable us to continue our work of identifying and supporting young Canadians who care about positively contributing to their communities. Together we will rebuild the world we want—a world that is a better place for all.

THE LORAN SCHOLAR JOURNEY

Loran is a community project built by hundreds of people who are committed to lifelong service and leadership. Supported by this community, Loran Scholars develop their leadership capacity through a four-year enrichment program before joining an engaged network of alumni who, in turn, give back within and beyond the Loran community as donors, volunteers, and leaders.

Loran Alumni make a difference

Alison Lee
(Redknee Loran Scholar '09)
Director of Operations, Breathe99
Montreal, QC

"I find that Loran folks validate and affirm ideas like following your moral instincts and doing something that's risky." Looking back at her Loran experience, Alison Lee most values the community gatherings where she gained inspiration from talking to civic-minded people pursuing unconventional paths.

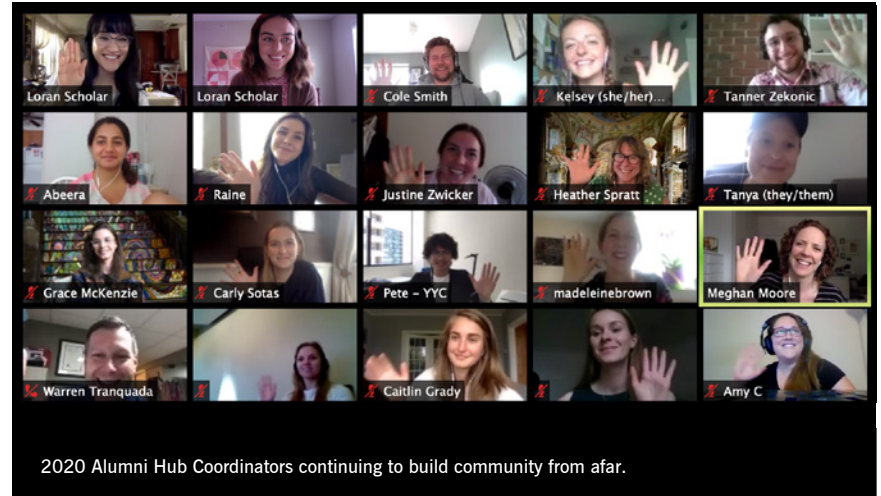

"It's always been important to me to avoid becoming too comfortable," she says. A University of Waterloo Nanotechnology Engineering graduate, Alison knew she wanted "work that has an obvious connection to the public good." She currently finds it in her role as Director of Operations for Breathe99, where the company's product—a lightweight, reusable, industrial respirator—has an immediate benefit in a pandemic world, but where the company's mission stretches longer-term to accessible public healthcare.

Since graduation, Alison has continued to give back and to support Loran candidates, scholars, and alumni throughout their journeys as a volunteer and donor. A former alumni hub coordinator, she remarks, "Those organic connections to the Loran network are so magical. It's a way to connect with people outside of your daily bubble."

Meeting Loran Scholars both older and younger challenges Alison to push herself beyond her familiar world: "Seeing how big students dream and how hard they work is reinvigorating. It reminds me to think bigger and broader." She believes that the qualities Loran looks for in young people, as well as the breadth and depth that she sees across the Loran community, are needed to address today's complex problems: "I think the Loran Award represents the values that our society needs to make necessary fundamental changes."

LIVING LORAN

2020 Alumni Hub Coordinators continuing to build community from afar.

Wherever their paths lead them, our scholars share a lifetime commitment to taking meaningful risks, supporting and strengthening their communities, and leading with integrity.

The average age of our 527 alumni is only 30. Despite their youth, Loran alumni are taking on challenging leadership roles and working towards solutions in every sector.

Throughout the year, alumni remain connected to Loran as volunteers, lending their time and expertise to the foundation as assessors, selection committee administrators and interviewers, mentors, and fourth-year transition coaches.

The annual alumni campaign is a significant financial contribution to the foundation and an important measure of how deeply invested alumni are in future generations of scholars. This past year, 73% of alumni contributed to the campaign and all donations were generously matched dollar-for-dollar by the McCall MacBain Foundation as a contribution to our endowment.

Our eight national and three international alumni hubs connect past scholars around the globe. Each hub engages alumni through social, professional, and service-oriented gatherings. As the Loran alumni population grows, almost doubling by 2027, the hubs serve as intimate networks that support alumni as they contribute their talents to Canada and the world.

96% of alumni have donated a cumulative total of $1.96 million to the foundation

DEVELOPING CITIZENS OF IMPACT

Loran alumni are giving back to their communities and pushing boundaries in such fields as technology, the arts, finance, medicine, law, and science. Though their work spans a multitude of sectors and disciplines, alumni share and continue to be guided by Loran's core values of character, service, and leadership.

An academic, family medicine and hospice physician, and educator, Amy Tan (Loran Scholar '96) most recently served as Associate Professor of Family Medicine at the University of Calgary. Her passion for advance care planning, shared decision-making, and improving the patient experience drives her research work, medical education course designs, and health equity advocacy. She has been featured nationally for her work in anti-racism within medicine. Amy is also a volunteer organizer of Masks4Canada, which advocates to all levels of Canadian government and the public to fight the transmission of COVID-19. She previously co-chaired the Undergraduate Education Committee at the College of Family Physicians of Canada, and volunteers annually with Loran. Amy looks forward to her next chapter after relocating with her family to Victoria, BC, to take on the position of Medical Director of Victoria Hospice and engage in clinical, health service delivery, and research work pertaining to equitable community-based palliative care, advance care planning, and hospice care.

Jérémy Boulanger-Bonnely (W. Garfield Weston Loran Scholar '11) is a Pierre Elliott Trudeau Foundation Scholar and a Vanier Canada Graduate Scholar, currently pursuing his Doctor of Juridical Science at the University of Toronto and practicing at Norton Rose Fulbright LLP. His research explores the role of public participation in improving access to justice. Jérémy served as a law clerk to the Honourable Clément Gascon at the Supreme Court of Canada, and practiced as a lawyer in civil, appellate, and constitutional litigation in Montreal. In parallel to his research, he remains actively involved in access to justice initiatives, including as a pro bono lawyer in two constitutional cases and as a volunteer for Interligne's LGBTQ+ legal information clinic in Montreal.

A healthcare futurist, Damon Ramsey (Loran Scholar '04) has forged a career blending his clinical expertise and command of software design. Eight years ago, he co-founded InputHealth, a digital health software company tackling the healthcare industry's inefficiencies through patient-centered data collection and analysis. Led by Damon as CEO, InputHealth re-envisioned health record-keeping through its Collaborative Health Record platform, which helps patients and providers share information more easily and supports integrated care. During COVID-19, this secure, cloud-based platform has improved the ability to track and screen patients. In working to lead a paradigm shift in global healthcare, Damon is also a practicing physician and an associate clinical instructor at the University of British Columbia.

Heather Holland (Loran Scholar '98) serves as Executive Director at Peterborough Youth Services (PYS), a non-profit, social service counselling agency in Peterborough, ON. Under Heather's leadership, PYS provides counselling and support to young people aged 10–18 and their families, as well as youth justice programming. PYS has made its services accessible by phone, video, and in person during COVID-19. Previously, Heather worked as a Learning and Development Specialist at the Ontario Centre of Excellence for Child and Youth Mental Health, and as the Executive Director at Planned Parenthood in Ottawa. She earned her Master of Social Work from Carleton University and has volunteered with Loran as a mentor, assessor, interviewer, and fourth-year transition coach.

A note from our inaugural Cluett Fellow

Daniel Brown ('15)
2019-2020 Cluett Fellow

“ One of my greatest takeaways from this fellowship is how deeply our staff cares about all Loran Scholars, and how hard they are working to make this organization an even better one for scholars to come. The time I got to spend with scholars—connecting with them and hearing their stories—was by far my favourite part of this job. I've always looked forward to being with our community because of its contagiously uplifting energy, so it was amazing to have that feeling so often this year. It has meant the world to me to play a small part in their Loran journeys.

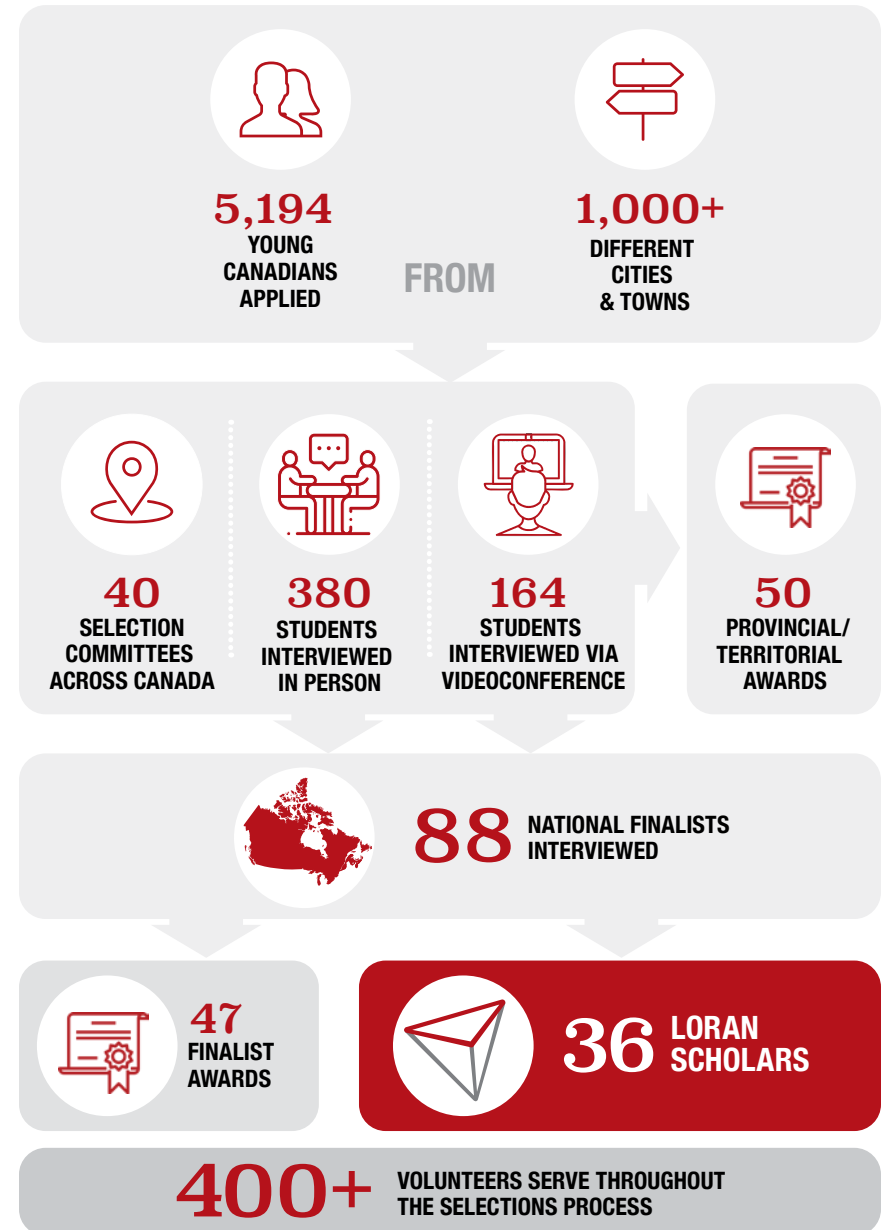

IDENTIFYING EXCEPTIONAL OVERALL PROMISE

We believe that a young person's character is a better indicator of overall potential than standard academic measures. Our rigorous selection process includes a written assessment, as well as individual and panel interviews with a diverse group of community-engaged Loran volunteers.

To find these young people, we enlist the help of guidance counsellors and teachers at approximately 3,500 high schools and Cegeps across the country. They recommend candidates who best demonstrate strength of character, commitment to service in the community, and leadership potential. In addition, over half of our candidates apply independently through the direct pool.

In 2019/20, we received 5,194 applications and interviewed 544 candidates in 24 regions across the country. On January 31 and February 1, 2020, the top 88 candidates attended our national selections weekend in Toronto, where eight committees and four national co-chairs selected 36 Loran Scholars – our largest cohort yet. Additionally, one-time entrance awards were also granted to 47 finalists ($5,000) and 50 provincial/territorial award recipients ($2,000). The weekend was enhanced with enrichment programming to help prepare all finalists for the transition to university.

Loran Mentors make a difference

Paul Smith
Lieutenant-Commander,
Royal Canadian Navy
Halifax, NS

Over 28 years in the Royal Canadian Navy, Lieutenant-Commander Paul Smith knew the value of senior officers coaching the junior officers on the rise. He was looking for a mentorship opportunity—to “have some small part in shaping the future of the country’s next leaders”—when Loran piqued his interest.

“Given the position we’re in with society today, it’s more important now than ever to hone the leadership skills of the next generation,” Paul reflects. “I think that Loran is a great foundation for doing that. It gives mentors an opportunity to make a difference in the lives of these youth who are so caring and engaged not only in their communities but in the country writ large.”

For Paul, one of the best ways to mentor is to pass on his own life experiences, in hopes that sharing about them will help inform his mentee’s own decisions and perspectives. Remarking on the “seamless” structure of Loran’s mentorship program, he found that the experience of mentoring Yuna Im (BMO Capital Markets Loran Scholar ’16) over the past four years has gone both ways. “It lit a fire in me to do more with engaging youth,” he says, including volunteering with Loran’s regional selections, alongside Yuna, and with other youth-oriented organizations.

Paul believes it is the responsibility of his generation to nourish those who will lead next: “Being a mentor with Loran is a great way to do that for anybody who wants to inspire or harness the hope of the next generation of leaders. You get a sense of pride and that the future is in good hands.”

 415 business and community leaders engaged as mentors since 2005

 132 current mentors across Canada

 1000+ mentor hours volunteered annually

One of our greatest assets is our national network of mentors who embody the values of Loran and encourage our scholars to do the same. Since 2005, our one-on-one mentorship program has involved 415 mentors representing a breadth of professional and volunteer interests. Mentors commit to sharing their experiences and networks with the scholars through their four years of undergraduate study.

EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING AND DISCOVERY

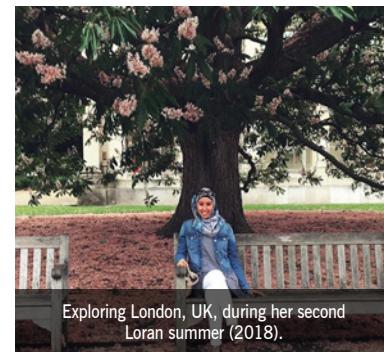

Meeting former Governor General David Johnston in Ottawa (2017).

Summer experiences emphasize tri-sectoral leadership, expanding scholars' understanding of Canada, the world, and themselves. Our summer program complements scholars' academic studies, providing up to $10,000 in funding to facilitate professional skill-building through practical work experience in the public, private, and non-profit sectors. Each scholar becomes familiar with policy creation during their public policy summer, explores grassroots non-profit work in their community development summer, and develops their capacity to work in a for-profit environment through their enterprise summer.

For Sara Abdessamie (BMO Loran Scholar '16), her three Loran summer experiences transformed her early interest in supporting students with disabilities into opportunities to promote accessibility issues on a national and global scale.

Sara, who graduated from Dalhousie University in 2020 with a BSc. in Medical Sciences and Genetics, appreciated the opportunity to dive deep into broader issues affecting Canadians with disabilities in her public policy summer with the Government of Canada's Office for Disability Issues (ODI). As part of a large team preparing to introduce the country's first Accessibility Act, her research led to a presentation and report on the role artificial intelligence can play in addressing disability issues. Sara says the summer in Ottawa added depth and breadth to an interest in accessibility that began in high school and continued with her work with on-campus disability issues and as a member of the Prime Minister's Youth Council.

Sara's community development summer, spent in London, UK, incorporated her ODI experience and provided an opportunity to act both globally and locally to promote the positive contribution of workers with disabilities. As a Program Officer with Business Disability International, Sara used social media to expand to a global community the organization's campaign of positive messages about the contributions of people with disabilities. At the same time, Sara made a difference locally, working directly with the London business community to improve workplace accessibility and encourage the inclusion of people with disabilities. Her experience in London also offered insights into different approaches and ways of thinking about issues such as accessibility. "It offers a different perspective. I've been able to use what I learned to continue the work later in Canada," she comments.

Exploring London, UK, during her second Loran summer (2018).

Returning to Halifax for her enterprise summer, Sara's internship at SaltWire Network, Nova Scotia's largest newspaper company, was an excellent opportunity to "see behind the scenes" how the media industry works. As a Membership and Communications Intern, Sara sees her work, which included designing a campaign to promote news literacy among youth, as another means of empowering youth to be aware of and to speak up about the socio-political issues that affect us all. On a practical note, she remarks, "The experience I had working with the newspaper helped me understand how to better do my research and use the tools and resources that I have in order to work smarter and not necessarily harder."

Reflecting on her Loran summer experiences, Sara notices that all three influenced her perspective on the many directions her Medical Sciences degree could take her, and enlightened her as to the intersection of public policy, community development, and enterprise. "They all interrelate so much," she says, adding that in any sector, "you can definitely have an impact."

OUR PARTNERS IN EXPERIENTIAL SUMMER LEARNING

ENTERPRISE

Thrive Health (Vancouver, BC)

"As employers, we are always in search of bright, curious, and productive people to join our growing teams. The Loran Scholars are just that, and we are lucky to have them work with us as we build software to empower patients through specialist care. They are a pleasure to work with and offer unique perspectives – the only challenge is we don't want to give them up at the end of the summer!"

Johanna Robertson, Marketing Director, Thrive Health

PUBLIC POLICY

Women's Shelters Canada (Ottawa, ON)

"Since its inception in 2013, Women's Shelters Canada has had the pleasure of hosting a Loran Scholar. With a small team of four, their contributions have been of great value. All of them have been committed and passionate about the work. They are flexible and eager to learn. As a national organization based in Ottawa, we also very much value getting the perspectives of individuals from across the country. We look forward to hosting future Loran Scholars."

Lise Martin, Executive Director, Women's Shelters Canada

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

Canada India Wellness Initiative (Chettipalayam, India)

"The Canada India Wellness Initiative (CIWI) has had Loran summer students each summer since 2015. Scholars have had to adapt to an often difficult environment, coming face-to-face with the many consequences of poverty, and also having many responsibilities with respect to logistical organization of medical care for over 400 school children. It has been amazing for our organization to see how the scholars have flourished in this environment and the incredible value that they have brought to our organization. Not only has each scholar excelled in the organizational and academic aspects of the program, but they have each brought a unique and distinct flair, and each left their mark on the children and the school through original ideas and programs that they have conceived of and led. Our Indian school administrators and teachers now eagerly await the arrival of the scholar each year! We cannot say enough about our cherished Loran Scholars."

Building Community

With 134 scholars currently studying at 18 different universities across the country, we believe in the value of building a community of young Canadians who inspire and motivate each other—together and apart. Each year, to facilitate this, our incoming class embarks together on an orientation expedition, and we bring in-stream scholars together for an annual retreat, regional events, and our national scholars' forum.

Even in these times of distancing, our community has banded together to keep uplifting, learning, helping, and staying in touch. From March 2020 onward, we have been taking proactive measures to help scholars stay safe while reimagining our offerings to ensure the Loran Scholar experience is not diminished. To continue building community, we have hosted virtual gatherings and transformed our programming online, taking advantage of digital channels to broaden our Scholars' Retreat and fourth-year transition program. Please reference page 6 for more information about our COVID-19 response and efforts to be adaptive and flexible with our programming while we support our scholars through this uncertain time.

ORIENTATION EXPEDITION

Through the generous support of Nancy and Bob Young, the incoming class of Loran Scholars participated in an Outward Bound orientation expedition in August 2019. The week-long excursion into Algonquin Park encouraged scholars to push their limits through teamwork, physical challenges, and risk-taking. This experience builds a shared sense of identity as Loran Scholars before they disperse across Canada to begin their first semester of university.

SCHOLARS' RETREAT

In August 2019, all in-stream scholars gathered for peer-to-peer learning, personal development, and reflection. Scholars created and led the weekend's programming with presentations on the transition to first year, consent and bystander training, finding meaningful service, financial planning, developing authentic mentorship relationships, and making the most of summer experiences. Alumni facilitated sessions on anti-oppression training and mental health resources, and offered perspectives on how Loran values have guided both their professional and personal paths.

FOURTH-YEAR TRANSITION PROGRAM

Our fourth-year transition program is designed to help scholars plan for next steps following their undergraduate studies. To kick things off, in advance of our 2019 retreat, fourth-year scholars came together for a day of programming and meetings with volunteer coaches. The program continued throughout the year, matching scholars with alumni as well as community and business leaders from our extensive network to help them make choices during this critical time in their growth. Our fourth-year transition program culminated in February at the fourth-year Scholars' Forum.

SCHOLARS' FORUM

In February 2020, scholars attended our annual forum, which celebrates and connects the newest and graduating classes as part of our National Selections weekend. The forum provided an opportunity for these cohorts to learn from one another as well as from Loran alumni and community leaders. Mikie Allan ('13) and Patrick Duncan ('06) led sessions on personal finance, and Mark Schaan ('97) facilitated a session about public policy. Michelle Dagnino ('98) spoke to fourth years about finding passion and purpose through work, while Laura D'Angelo ('01) presented to first years and finalists about building endurance and leadership capacity for the long haul. Scholars also received resume support from volunteer human resources specialists remotely before the weekend of workshops on planning, pathfinding, and developing employment and leadership skills to bolster their future endeavours.

Loran Volunteers make a difference

Paul Larocque President & CEO, Arts Umbrella Vancouver, BC

Paul Larocque vividly remembers his first minutes as a new Loran volunteer. “To say it was a moving, inspirational moment is an understatement. I was hooked from that day on,” he recalls.

In over 18 years as a volunteer, Paul has served as a regional assessor, interviewer, and chair; a national interviewer and chair; and twice as a mentor. “Each of the candidates I meet provides me with inspiration, and I always walk away with hope in our future and pride in the next generation,” he praises.

Paul points out the immense impact of Loran alumni on every discipline: “These young people are encouraged and nurtured in their undergraduate years to develop compassion, courage, and conviction in life, and ultimately, to be able to explore and better understand the world around them so that they can make it better.”

Loran’s mission, Paul says, is one for our times. “Now more than ever, I think we all realize our world is truly in the hands of our youngest citizens, and given everything we are experiencing, we look to them with so much expectation.” He believes that Loran volunteers, therefore, have a unique and powerful opportunity to make a difference in Canada and the world by “finding and nurturing the promise of character in young Canadians.”

The students who become Loran Scholars—thanks to the collective effort of hundreds of volunteers—are “truly reflective of this country’s diversity, so it’s absolutely critical that this is also reflected in our volunteers,” Paul notes. “All of their voices will be represented and that will ensure that the program is successful. It’s this wonderful cycle.”

 616 individuals volunteered with the foundation in 2020

 Our 400+ selections donate over 9,000 hours to select each class of Loran Scholars

 Over 40% of alumni volunteer with Loran

Our work selecting and stewarding scholars to realize their potential relies upon a network of dedicated volunteers who assess and interview our candidates, support our scholars, and serve on our board. These volunteers come from a variety of sectors and careers, and demonstrate in their own lives the very values we look for in our scholars.

Thank you to the 616 individuals listed below who collectively gave over 11,000 hours of their time last year. We are grateful for their generosity and belief in making long-term investments in young Canadians who demonstrate character, a commitment to service, and the potential to be future leaders.

Loran Donors make a difference

The Azrieli Foundation

"In many ways," Naomi Azrieli begins, "education is the key to human continuity. It's how we move forward as a unified society." For the Azrieli Foundation—one of Canada's largest philanthropic foundations, which Naomi leads as chair and CEO—"we consider education to be the most important factor in empowering not only individuals but whole communities."

In addition to Loran's track record of impact and effectiveness as a charity, what drew the Azrieli Foundation to invest in Loran Scholars was an alignment of missions: both foundations share a commitment to providing access to higher education opportunities, and a belief in bold, service-driven leadership for creating positive future outcomes. Since 2015, the Azrieli Foundation has underwritten seven Loran Awards, as well as significant funding to increase awareness about the award in Québec.

Our post-pandemic future, Naomi says, needs young people who see beyond themselves and who think creatively about how to give back to their communities. The "pandemic of intolerance," she adds, needs education for its ability to broaden perspectives, build empathy, and accelerate success. To this end, and because of Loran's focus on finding and strengthening leaders of character, "an investment in Loran is an investment in potential, not only in young people but in our country and our global society."

Urging individuals and organizations from diverse backgrounds to join and support Loran's work, Naomi continues, "I think Canada needs Loran—and if the Azrieli Foundation can make an impact by supporting these students in partnership with Loran, we're very proud to play that role."

OUR PARTNERS INVESTING IN POTENTIAL

Each year, the Loran Scholars Foundation benefits from the support of hundreds of Canadians, companies, and foundations aligned with our mission of investing in young people who demonstrate character, service, and leadership potential. We thank those listed below for their financial contributions in support of our mission.

Loran Scholars Foundation

Loran Program

Year-ending April 30, 2020

	2020	2019
Revenue
Donations	$ 3,766,921	$ 3,682,135
Total revenue	3,766,921	3,682,135
Expenses
Stipend grants	1,452,850	1,453,875
Enrichment program
Summer	108,025	320,853
Mentorship and stewardship	176,553	170,087
Gatherings (retreat, conferences etc.)	413,645	287,428
Selections	579,532	331,692
Subtotal	2,730,605	2,563,935
General and Administration	550,612	350,650
Total expenses	3,281,217	2,914,585
Investment (loss) Income	($610,699)	884,431
Excess of revenue over expenses	($124,995)	$ 1,651,981

Note: due to COVID-19, our Summer Experience program was delayed and disrupted, resulting in lower expenses. In addition, with our fiscal year-end falling at the height of the economic downturn due to COVID-19, our reported results reflect a significant unrealized loss on our investment portfolio to reflect the market value of these investments as at April 30, 2020. However, at the time of publishing (September 2020), our investment portfolio has recovered, and now exceeds its pre-pandemic level.

INCOME

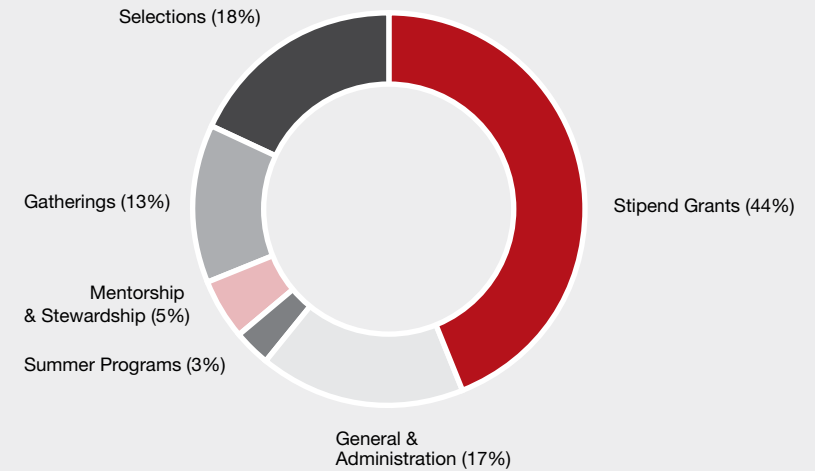

WITH TUITION

Our partner universities offer a matching tuition waiver for Loran Scholars. Total cost of $900,442 is based on data submitted by universities.

We are committed to the greatest of Canada's natural resources: our youth.

We work to identify and support talented students who show promise of leadership and a strong commitment to service in the community.

We fund these citizens to study on Canadian campuses, to the benefit of their future and ours.
