

LORAN  CHARACTER SERVICE LEADERSHIP
Scholars Foundation

2022

ANNUAL REPORT

The Loran Scholars Foundation is a national charity working in partnership with universities, donors, and volunteers across the country to find and nurture young people in Canada who show strength of character and commitment to service, challenging them to realize their full potential. The Foundation has been selecting and supporting thousands of exceptional young Canadians since 1988.

NOT SIMPLY A SCHOLARSHIP — WE INVEST IN OUR COLLECTIVE FUTURE

- We believe the potential of youth is found in their character. We look beyond a student's transcript to find evidence of integrity, grit, and generosity of spirit.
- We select Loran Scholars and fund their studies in Canada, providing them with a comprehensive leadership enrichment program focused on exploration, discovery, challenge, and growth. Over four years, nurtured by our community of supporters, scholars strengthen their capacity to become leaders in every sector.
- Together with close to 800 volunteers, 600 donors, 615 alumni, and 25 university partners, we invest in young people at a pivotal moment in their development, connecting them with a network of other values-driven leaders to amplify their impact.

Loran Scholars make a difference

Laurence Breton
2021 McCall MacBain Loran Scholar
Saint-Léon de Standon, Québec
McGill University

"Being involved in my community was always something essential to my identity," Laurence Breton opens, "so I was afraid that I would have to give up that part of myself in order to work through school." Loran, she realized, gave her a way to pursue her studies without sacrificing her community engagement.

Grateful to be selected as a scholar, Laurence set out to make the most of the opportunities given to her. At the end of her first year, she says the best part has been meeting equally values-driven peers who have become a key source of support. Laurence has also noticed that the broader Loran network is ready to help ("people are always so happy when you reach out to them!" she adds).

During her first year at McGill, Laurence did not hesitate to start learning and exploring. She volunteers as a French teacher at a Montréal community centre, and continued her involvement from Cegep with McGill's Student Refugee Program. Laurence also discovered her interest in Indigenous Studies, which she carried into her Loran community development summer while working for Circles for Reconciliation, a non-profit which promotes reconciliation between Indigenous and non-Indigenous people in Canada. This interest, along with the support of her Loran mentor, led her to redirect her studies to McGill's Social Work program.

Although it was financial freedom that first drew Laurence to apply to Loran, she wants others to know: "The most important thing is the comprehensive program. The heart of Loran's work is in the opportunities and the network you gain." And for anyone looking to apply or to get involved, she has only one message: "Don't second guess yourself, just go for it."

UNLOCKING THE POTENTIAL OF CANADA'S YOUTH

LORAN, short for Long-Range Aid to Navigation, is a system that uses three points to determine one's course for a long journey. The Loran Scholars Foundation identifies and supports young people who demonstrate our core pillars: character, service, and leadership. Guided by these values, Loran Scholars are challenged to take meaningful risks and create positive change in their communities throughout their lives.

As the COVID-19 pandemic persists, we see more than a generation of students disrupted by unprecedented world events — we see a generation ready to ignite change, and we're seeking out their sparks of potential. At Loran, our mission is to find young people who approach challenges with curiosity, perseverance, and creativity; who are humble, inquisitive, and thoughtful; who shun the status quo in favour of unconventional paths; and who will take action to build a better world, while bringing others along with them. We trust that Canada will thrive if we ensure that high-potential students are given the opportunity to imagine, explore, and create the future. With more than three decades underway, Loran alumni continue to make meaningful contributions to their communities long after their university years.

The value of the Loran Award is realized through our comprehensive four-year leadership enrichment program; our network of mentors, volunteers, university partners, and donors; and the lifelong community of scholars and alumni we cultivate.

A Launchpad for Potential

We encourage Loran Scholars to discover how they can most effectively contribute wherever they go, and to resist the temptation to take easy or conventional paths. Each Loran Scholar is granted a renewable four-year award valued at over $100,000, comprising a $10,000 living stipend and up to $10,000 in tuition waiver from one of our 25 partner universities per year. Scholars can access up to $14,000 in funding to build practical skills through summer work experiences in three sectors (enterprise, public policy, and community development). For guidance throughout their time in the program, scholars are paired with mentors who challenge them and introduce them to their new communities. Loran Scholars use these opportunities and more to broaden and enrich their academic studies and develop their leadership capabilities.

Reflective and Thorough Selection Process

The Loran Award is not a reward for past accomplishments, but a long-term investment in potential. We search for young people who have the capacity to grow into the leaders of integrity we need. To select Loran Scholars, we look for qualities that grades alone cannot show: kindness, a breadth of interests and deep commitment to service, the courage to make difficult decisions, and the determination to work towards long-term goals. Through a comprehensive assessment and interview process, we select up to 36 Loran Scholars from over 5,000 applicants. We also grant more than 100 one-time provincial/territorial and finalist awards annually.

Extensive Network

We understand the value of connection and relationships in supporting scholars' future growth, and we welcome them into a community of volunteers, donors, staff, and past and present scholars. Incoming Loran Scholars forge strong bonds and prepare to enter university through our orientation program. All in-stream scholars participate in an annual four-day retreat, forums, and a transition program during their graduating year. Our alumni come together and collaborate through their own hubs and larger reunion events. The Loran network enables connections to be made across years and disciplines, and provides inspiration and motivation for scholars.

THE YEAR IN REVIEW

A MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR AND CEO

When Bob Cluett founded Loran in 1988, he envisioned it as a “community project”. His approach was rooted in cooperation and partnership — collaborating with others to create something greater than any individual could achieve on their own. At that time our community consisted of a collection of discerning volunteers trained to assess, interview, and select candidates based on Loran’s unique criteria of character, service, and leadership; a handful of university partners committed to providing matching funding so these exceptional students could study on their campuses free from financial burden; a network of guidance counsellors and educators in high schools and Cegeps keen to promote the opportunity to promising candidates; and a dedicated group of trustees, willing to make an investment in the potential of Loran Scholars.

As this community of support has expanded and deepened over the years, it has enabled Loran to grow, flourish, and evolve into the organization we are today. Close to three and a half decades later, not only has our community of volunteers, donors, and institutional partners increased, but we now have more than 600 Loran alumni spread around the world who are integral members with a vested interest in the success of this “community project” called Loran.

Despite the ongoing disruptions we all experienced in 2021-22, we drew our strength from the Loran community. The commitment of our donors, who continued to invest in our mission, giving us the financial stability and confidence to persevere; the flexibility of our volunteers, who adapted their skills to online environments, ensuring the integrity of our selections process was not undermined; the dedication and responsiveness of our university partners to find ways to build the student experience on- and offline; the examples set by Loran Scholars and alumni of how to show up in times of challenge and uncertainty — providing much needed hope and motivation — through their actions and efforts. While we’ve experienced a range of emotions over the course of this pandemic, the enduring feeling related to our community is one of deep gratitude. Thank you to all of you who have kept us strong this year.

Our 2021/22 year saw us operating in a similar manner to last year with a suspension of all in-person activities. Loran is fortunate to have a team of individuals on staff who are deeply committed to our mission and possess not only the adaptability, but the motivation to find optimal solutions when faced with constraints. We built on what we learned in 2020/21, refining ways to strengthen community, identify potential, and deliver our programming — creating, as a result, an even more connected and enriched experience for scholars.

This year we also asked ourselves some difficult questions about who feels included in this community and how we can ensure the young people we welcome into it know that they, themselves, belong. Through the leadership of Black and Indigenous scholars, in bringing forward their experiences and concerns to initiate an important dialogue, we worked with our Equity and Inclusivity Advisory Group to create an Equity, Diversity, Inclusion, and Anti-Racism Framework and Action Plan. Over the course of this year we made significant progress on our Action Plan, working towards: an accessible selection process that recognizes strength of character, commitment to service, and leadership potential in all contexts; a representative community that is inclusive and respects diverse perspectives and voices, in which all members feel a sense of belonging; a program that offers transformative, growth-oriented opportunities that are accessible, equitable, and responsive to the needs and aspirations of a diverse group of emerging leaders; a workplace that fosters inclusion and diversity by ensuring fair and equitable employment processes for all; and continuous learning, growth, and development in our approaches to equity, diversity, inclusion, anti-racism, and reconciliation. As a community, we believe that diversity is an essential component of excellence, and we know that our community is strengthened through a diversity of voices, experiences and perspectives. Recognizing this is ongoing, ever-evolving work, our goal is to ensure Loran is a welcoming community where individuals of all backgrounds and identities feel a sense of belonging.

This pandemic has forced us to do many things differently: we’ve had to operate in compromised conditions; we’ve experimented boldly with our processes and delivery; we’ve connected with and listened to our community in different ways; we’ve taken the time to reflect on our experiences and adopted new ways of working. And yet, despite all this difference, what we do, fundamentally, has not changed. If anything, our mission to identify young people with potential and inspire them to lead with integrity has been a much-needed antidote to the uncertainty and discord we see in the world right now. Loran’s focus on identifying the next generation of engaged citizens keeps our sights set on the future. As we move through this very surreal time and the world searches for a way forward, the hope and optimism that we continue to cultivate within and through our community will be in high demand. We feel great potential for Loran’s fourth decade, and thanks to your generosity and invested belief, we know we can realize that potential.

THE LORAN SCHOLAR JOURNEY

Loran is a community project supported by three pillars — donors, volunteers, and university partners — who share our collective vision and who are dedicated to lifelong service and leadership. Each year, they uphold our ability to search the country for each cohort of Loran Scholars. Supported by this community, scholars develop their leadership capabilities through a comprehensive four-year enrichment program before joining an engaged network of alumni who, in turn, give back within and beyond the Loran community as donors, volunteers, and leaders.

LIFELONG ALUMNI COMMUNITY

Alumni re-invest their talents into improving their communities, support current scholars as volunteers and coaches, and stay connected through a network of local and global hubs.

FOUR-YEAR ENRICHMENT PROGRAM

THREE PILLARS OF SUPPORT

Our work is reliant on the generosity of a network of close to 800 volunteers, 600 donors, and 25 university partners who co-invest in and support scholars throughout their journeys.

We believe that building a better future for all of us starts with our young people, and that investing in them catalyzes a ripple effect that will be felt across Canadian society.

If the last few years have taught us anything, it's that Canada needs caring, civic-minded youth to lead us into the future. In 2022, we provided scholars with a complete virtual experience, connecting them throughout the year as they returned to their campuses. We also held a virtual celebration to reveal our 33rd class of scholars and thank our unwavering community for sustaining our work.

BUILDING COMMUNITY

To have a thriving future, Canada needs people who can build bridges and take action in all corners of society. Community is at the heart of Loran's work, and we believe it is a key ingredient to achieving this. From day one, Loran Scholars join a supportive community that shares a commitment to service and leadership. They inspire one another to reach their potential. They encourage each other to boldly tackle challenges. They work together. They hold their fellow scholars accountable to remember the values that unite them.

Traditionally, our incoming class embarks on an orientation expedition, and we bring in-stream scholars together for an annual retreat and our national scholars' forum. In 2021-2022, due to the ongoing pandemic, we delivered an undiminished, expanded, fully virtual scholar program to ensure continuous support, deep connection, and dynamic learning experiences for scholars.

Despite the restrictions and difficulties we collectively faced over the past two years, the strength of the Loran network has seen us through. We were delighted to hold our second virtual National Community Celebration on March 31, 2022, attended by more than 200 past and present scholars, volunteers, donors, and university representatives. Tuning in from all over the world, we celebrated the graduating class of 2018, officially welcomed the first-year class of 2021 into our community, and unveiled the newest cohort of Loran Scholars. We were also fortunate to hear and learn from keynote speaker Wes Hall, an established innovator, entrepreneur, and philanthropist.

The pandemic has brought into sharp focus the importance of strong community ties. Whether online or in person, we aim for all Loran community members to leave each experience with a renewed sense of purpose, belonging, motivation, and hope.

2021-2022 VIRTUAL PROGRAMMING

Orientation Expedition

Before beginning university in the fall, our orientation expedition encourages incoming scholars to step outside of their comfort zones, take risks, persevere through challenges, and bond as a cohort. Sharing this first experience as Loran Scholars marks the start of their undergraduate journeys and fosters team-building and personal growth. In 2021, our first-year orientation spanned two months, offering virtual opportunities for the class of 2021 to get to know one another and prepare for the experiences to come in Loran's program.

Scholars' Retreat

Before each new academic year, our retreat provides space for leadership development, reflection, and social connection, to help scholars resume their studies feeling energized and inspired. From August 20–23, 2021, we held our virtual retreat, supported by RBC Future Launch. Through more than 31 online events and sessions, scholars shared in professional and soft skill-building, peer-to-peer support, scholar- and alumni-led panels, and mandatory training for scholars on equity-centred leadership, sexual violence prevention, and community building in relationship with Indigenous communities. Although we missed meeting in person, this change in format allowed us to record retreat sessions and create a digital library of resources for scholars to reference throughout the year.

Fourth-Year Transition Program

Our fourth-year transition program is designed to help the graduating class navigate their final year of undergraduate studies and encourage them to make bold choices about their next steps in the years to come. Throughout August and September 2021, over several different time zones, fourth-year scholars participated in online workshops, panels, and one-on-one career conversations with speakers and transition coaches from across the country — including 29 Loran alumni. The program continued throughout the year to help scholars make decisions during this critical time in their growth, and culminated in February at our online fourth-year Scholars' Forum.

Scholars' Forum

On February 12 & 13, 2022, our Scholars' Forum provided an important opportunity for the classes of 2021 and 2018 to connect as cohorts at the bookends of their Loran experiences. Held virtually for the second year, this annual gathering supports first- and fourth-year scholars in pathfinding, planning, and preparing for their future endeavours. The newest and graduating classes learn from peers, alumni, and community leaders through panels and discussions, and receive résumé support from volunteer human resources specialists from RBC and Air Canada. Our 2022 sessions offered insights into summer planning and job interview skills for first years, and focused on transitioning out of university studies for fourth-years.

Loran Alumni make a difference

Danya Dzedzic 2009 W. Garfield Weston Loran Scholar Director, Programs & Services, Muscular Dystrophy Canada Winnipeg, MB

Originally from a small farm in Manitoba, Danya Dzedzic headed to the east coast to study sciences at Mount Allison University as a Loran Scholar. Although she originally planned to pursue medicine, Danya decided — with the support of her Loran mentor — to pivot and work in the community sector, joining Muscular Dystrophy Canada as a service specialist. Seven years later, she says, “I’m now in the director position and still loving and learning more about the work that I do. I really feel I’ve found my niche.”

Danya has also returned to her Manitoban roots and continues to reinvest in her communities. She is deeply involved with Manitoba rugby as a coach, executive of her club, and women’s league convenor, and she gives back to Loran in multiple capacities, from donating to assessing applications to coordinating the Winnipeg alumni hub.

To Danya, “these roles feel like a natural evolution as a Loran alumna,” reminding her to live out the core values she shares with the alumni community. “We all remember the day we were told we were Loran Scholars,” she recalls. As life goes on, it’s grounding to stay in touch — “to remember why we do what we do.”

Danya believes Loran plays a vital role in helping young people develop their capacity to creatively tackle problems, and encouraging them to continue finding ways to make an impact throughout their careers. “That’s what makes me so proud to be a Loran Scholar,” she reflects. “A program like this finds people who can better lead our communities and country. The Loran Award reinforces the importance of character, service, and leadership — three core capabilities we need across all sectors of society in order to have a bright future.”

LIVING LORAN

Wherever their paths lead them, Loran Scholars share a lifelong commitment to leaving things better than they found them. Although the average age of Loran alumni is only 33, they go above and beyond to serve others and find solutions in every sector.

The habit of giving back is found throughout our alumni community. Alumni regularly volunteer in their own communities and with Loran, helping us select and interview each new class of scholars and stepping up as mentors and coaches to support them on their journeys. They also ensure the Foundation’s success by financially reinvesting in our mission each year. Our annual alumni campaign is a significant contribution to the Foundation and an important measure of how deeply committed alumni are to providing opportunities for future generations of scholars. This past year, 70% of alumni donated to the campaign and all gifts were generously matched dollar-for-dollar by the McCall MacBain Foundation as a contribution to our endowment.

Our network of 12 alumni hubs connects scholars locally and globally, offering valuable social, professional, and personal development opportunities for alumni of all ages. As Loran’s alumni population grows, almost doubling by 2027, the hubs serve as a support system for past scholars as they navigate how to contribute their talents to Canada and the world.

96% of alumni have donated a cumulative total of more than $2.37 million to the Foundation

DEVELOPING CITIZENS OF IMPACT

Loran alumni are giving back to their communities, pushing boundaries, and contributing to a more diverse leadership ecosystem in such fields as technology, the arts, finance, medicine, law, and science. Though their work spans a multitude of sectors and disciplines throughout Canada and the world, alumni share and continue to be guided by Loran's core values of character, service, and leadership.

François Tanguay-Renaud (BMO Loran Scholar '98) has been a Professor at Osgoode Hall Law School since 2008. He teaches and writes on criminal law, emergency law, war, and law and technology. He is currently the Director of the Osgoode Certificate in the Laws of Emergency, which he founded in response to the COVID-19 pandemic and other recent crises. He also directs Osgoode's Professional LLM in Canadian Common Law. Until 2021, François was Director of York University's Nathanson Centre on Transnational Human Rights, Crime and Security. He also co-founded York's JD/MA program in law and philosophy, and served as Osgoode's Associate Dean (Research). With degrees in civil and common law from McGill University, François completed his graduate work (BCL, DPhil) as a Rhodes Scholar at the University of Oxford. In his spare time, he has continually given back to Loran as a selections volunteer, donor, summer coach, and Fourth-Year Transition coach.

Peter Guo (W. Garfield Weston Loran Scholar '09) is a partner and Head of Algorithms at White Whale, a company he co-founded to make data science more accessible. Building upon the experiences and expertise acquired from large consulting projects in the last seven years, Peter is preparing his team to launch their first commercial product: DeepSea. Peter recently also played a critical role in designing and operating the transportation system for Team Canada at the 2022 Winter Olympics in Beijing. Peter grew up in Guelph, Ontario and currently resides in Calgary. Peter earned a BA and Sc in Physics, Economics, and History from McGill University and a graduate certificate in Data Science from Harvard University. Outside of work, Peter trains for adventure racing and mentors local technology grads. In addition to coordinating the Calgary alumni hub since 2016, Peter supports Loran as a donor and selections volunteer.

From Waterloo, ON, and now based in North Vancouver, Julie Van de Valk (Loran Scholar '12) earned her BSc in Geological Engineering at the University of British Columbia. Working for Natural Resources Canada in the Geologic Survey of Canada, Julie's expertise lies at the intersection of natural hazard risk, risk reduction, and emergency management. Her current projects include mobilizing a national, neighbourhood-level seismic risk model as well as evolving understanding of coastal risk in Canada. A volunteer with North Shore Rescue, Julie actively responds to mountain rescues and was selected for the helicopter rescue team. She was also recently awarded the Jen Higgins Grant from the Alpine Club of Canada to embark on a female-led ski traverse from Bella Coola to Knight Inlet in British Columbia. Julie is completing her master's degree remotely at Royal Roads University. She is a Loran donor and has volunteered as a retreat presenter and graduation ceremony presenter.

Sarah Michael (BMO Loran Scholar '93) is an international development expert specializing in sustainable development, peace and tolerance building, social inclusion, and post-conflict recovery. Currently serving as Country Manager for Azerbaijan, Sarah has built a career at The World Bank for nearly 19 years, leading innovative work with a focus on the Eastern Europe and Central Asia, and Africa regions. Previously, she was manager of The World Bank's Fragility, Conflict & Violence group, and prior to that she was a regional lead for sustainable development based in Tbilisi, Georgia. Sarah has a long history of building bridges between stakeholders including the highest levels of government, private sector, international organizations, local communities, and civil society. She earned her MPhil and PhD degrees from Cambridge University and studied Biology at Queen's University. Sarah supports Loran as a donor and has previously volunteered as a mentor, Fourth-Year Transition coach, and assessor.

Alex Mazer (BMO Loran Scholar '97) is a co-founder and co-CEO of Common Wealth, an award-winning financial technology company that provides digital group retirement plans for small and mid-sized business employees, not-for-profit employees, and self-employed professionals. Alex was previously a management consultant at McKinsey & Company and held various public service roles. As Director of Policy to the Ontario Minister of Finance during the global financial crisis, Alex helped deliver major reforms to Ontario's retirement policy, tax system, and fiscal framework. He is a graduate of McMaster University, the University of Toronto, and Harvard Law School, where he served as an editor of the Harvard Law Review. He volunteers as a coach for a competitive youth baseball team and as a Loran board director, interviewer, and Fourth-Year Transition coach. He also supports Loran as a monthly donor.

IDENTIFYING EXCEPTIONAL OVERALL PROMISE

We believe that a young person's character is a better indicator of potential than standard academic measures. Our rigorous selection process includes a written assessment, as well as individual and panel interviews with a diverse group of community-engaged Loran volunteers. This process allows ample opportunity for self-reflection and authentic conversation.

SELECTIONS REFLECTIONS

"Even just doing the interviews was such a great learning process for me. I was getting to meet so many incredible youth, accomplished interviewers, and upper year scholars who were sharing their awesome stories. I felt like even if I didn't win the award, I had already learned so much just through the interviews."

- Tanisha Kadia ('21)

To find these young people, we enlist the help of guidance counsellors and teachers at approximately 3,500 high schools and Cegeps, as well as youth organizations, across the country. They recommend candidates who demonstrate strength of character, commitment to service in the community, and leadership potential. In addition, over half of our candidates apply independently through the direct pool.

This year, nearly 500 Loran volunteers rose to a unique challenge: reviewing more than 5,100 applications, getting to know hundreds of youth across the country, and creating meaningful interview experiences for them at a distance. Our second virtual selections — executed with the support of "Zoom operator" Lindsey Li ('10) — were only possible with our volunteers' expertise, adaptability, and steadfast dedication to identifying the special qualities found in Loran Scholars. We are grateful for their support in a year when warm and insightful human connections were so important.

RÉFLEXIONS SUR LES SÉLECTIONS

« Les entrevues m'ont aidée à faire un bilan de mes accomplissements ainsi qu'à réfléchir aux valeurs à la base de mon engagement communautaire, social et politique. C'était un véritable processus d'introspection qui m'a conduite à définir mes ambitions. Encore à ce jour, je pratique une autocritique annuelle qui me guide dans mes projets d'avenir! »

UNIVERSITY PARTNERS ACROSS CANADA

Our consortium of university partners has been the bedrock of our mission since we were founded 34 years ago. These Canadian universities welcome Loran Scholars on campuses, providing them with the choice of and access to the country's best academic programs.

Year after year, our 25 university partners provide an annual tuition waiver of up to $10,000 for each student, matching the stipends funded by our donors. In 2021/22, this investment totalled $1,049,710. We are sincerely grateful to our partners for supporting Loran Scholars throughout their undergraduate studies and signalling their trust in our selection process.

Loran Mentors make a difference

Dr. Kalachelvi Saravanamuttu
Professor and Associate Dean of Equity, Diversity, Inclusion & Indigeneity, Faculty of Science, Department of Chemistry and Chemical Biology, McMaster University
Hamilton, ON

Before she became a Loran mentor, Kalai Saravanamuttu was recruited by her own workplace mentor, a long-time Loran volunteer, to get involved with the process of selecting scholars. Loran's focus on investing in the multifaceted potential of young people resonated with Kalai. "It's my boost for the year," she says of her interactions with students. "It gives you a snapshot of the leadership that Canada can expect."

Kalai was drawn to Loran's mentorship program, she explains, because she knew "how important mentoring is, the tangible impact it can have on a student's trajectory." As an educator, she had seen firsthand how "when you give a student opportunities and believe in them, that trajectory can change — it makes a real difference."

One of the most important lessons for mentors, from Kalai's perspective, is learning to help mentees approach goals without imposing their own, instead guiding them to come to their own conclusions. Conversely, mentees learn to receive external perspectives, to distill insights, and to think critically. Kalai is equally passionate about using mentorship to teach students the value of nonlinear paths, that "it's okay to improvise, seize unexpected opportunities and not conform to their original plans."

To steer these conversations, Kalai notes, it's vital to have mentors who bring a diversity of perspectives and backgrounds that will show students new possibilities. "Mentorship," she adds, "has to be democratic, accessible and meaningful to everybody, otherwise you're widening the equity gap. That's something I really like about Loran."

After mentoring a 2018 scholar, Kalai emphasizes the reciprocity of mentorship relationships, as well. With opportunities to meet both colleagues and students, she hopes her fellow and future Loran mentors will leave their experiences just as hope-filled and recharged.

 563 business and community leaders engaged as mentors since 1996

 141 current mentors across Canada

 1,112 mentor hours volunteered annually

Loran mentors are people who embody the values of Loran and encourage our scholars to do the same. They are businesspeople, community leaders, and experts in their fields, and they commit to sharing their experiences and networks with scholars over their four undergraduate years. Since 1996, our one-on-one mentorship program has involved 563 mentors representing a breadth of professional and volunteer interests.

EXPERIENTIAL SUMMER LEARNING IN THREE SECTORS

Miles Canyon, where the Yukon Conservation Society held guided nature walks for the public

For Loran Scholars, summer academic breaks represent opportunities for some of the most synergistic and transformational learning experiences of their university careers. Assisted by our extensive network and up to $14,000 in funding, students enrich their studies by building practical skills and experience in the professional world to which they will one day contribute. However, the Loran tri-sectoral summer program offers scholars much more than the work experience gained from traditional internships.

Whether spent in Canada or abroad, Loran summers are designed to provide scholars with greater breadth and understanding of the interactions and intersections between three major economic sectors, and the role each plays within the local, national, and global community. During public policy summers, scholars witness and participate in the process of policy creation. For enterprise summers, they contribute to the mission and goals of a for-profit environment. Rounding out the trifecta, scholars gain grassroots service experience in community development summers as part of a non-profit organization.

Despite the continuing challenges of COVID-19 work restrictions, scholars found rich opportunities to learn, contribute, and grow during their tri-sectoral summer experiences this past year.

“The best thing I’ve been able to do through Loran is to explore as much as possible,” says Faris Mecklai (Loran Scholar ’17), whose summer explorations took him north to Yukon, and overseas to Singapore, as well as into the virtual workforce as a remote employee.

Faris, originally from North Vancouver, BC, chose McMaster University in Hamilton, ON, for the breadth of study offered by its Arts and Science program. With a strong interest in environmental studies, Faris was excited to spend his public policy summer as an Environmental Policy Intern with the Yukon Conservation Society in Whitehorse, YT, where he conducted research and consulted with the Yukon government on the content for a wetlands protection act.

Part of the process is becoming familiar with government policy and practice, Faris comments, and learning that “while you can make a huge impact, it takes time.” His public policy summer put him “on a path to realize how big the gaps are on a systemic level — it ignites a flame in you and motivates you to do something about it.”

At age 23, Faris has already visited 33 countries, including Singapore, where he spent his community development summer as a Casework Intern with HOME, the Humanitarian Organization for Migrant Economics. Though a world away from his time in the Canadian North, his second summer experience was similarly meaningful.

Faris with some clients supported by HOME

“Around one million people are migrant workers in Singapore, enduring conditions that the United Nations classifies as modern slave labour,” Faris says. “HOME helps these workers retrieve the salaries they rightfully earn, as well as with abuse claims. I saw the impact on the ground in front of me, every day.”

Faris points out the importance of releasing some cultural norms and understandings as part of the learning experience. “I had a lot of work to do in Singapore (and in the Yukon) to educate myself, to understand context and history, to navigate class divides, to not let injustice pass me by, and to figure out how to help in some sort of meaningful way,” he reflects. He left his summer in Singapore with a drive to “go and fill the gaps,” on a trajectory toward future work in equity, diversity and inclusion.

Faris and the HiMama team enjoying some staff fun

During his enterprise summer, Faris worked remotely as a Marketing and Demand Generation Intern with HiMama, the Toronto-based creator of an all-in-one management app for childcare centres and families. While there, he helped to develop a guide for implementing a new professional development product.

Working for HiMama, a Certified B Corporation, was an opportunity for Faris to witness the rising importance of environmental and social governance in the workplace, and the private sector’s potential to work as a force for good. It was also a chance for him to practice working remotely.

Looking back, working in three sectors taught Faris “the importance of understanding each sector’s priorities and values, and working within them to do some good.” His summers also showed him “that I can merge the things I love with the things the world needs,” he observes. “As you bring your experience from one sector into another, these summers help you discover not only what you’re interested in, but also what you can do to benefit the world.”

To Faris, that’s the true value of the Loran Award — the ability to learn how to make a positive impact. “By investing in you,” he remarks, “it helps you do better by someone or something else. That’s the real power of Loran.”

DYNAMIC VIRTUAL WORK OPPORTUNITIES

Although our traditional summer work experience program was disrupted in 2021 due to the pandemic, 83 scholars secured work opportunities in policy, community-based, and private sector roles. We are grateful for the continued support of our summer employment partners in creating such valuable learning experiences.

PUBLIC POLICY

Colleen Collins, Vice President

Canada West Foundation, Calgary, Alberta

The Canada West Foundation hosted a Loran Scholar for its fourth consecutive year. These young people are smart, have a great attitude and work ethic, and are genuinely kind people. They bring energy and perspectives we truly appreciate. I used to wade through hundreds of applications to hire for our summer students but now I rely on the Loran Scholars program to select exceptional individuals from a very short list – I would hire any one of these students.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

Kaela Neil, Strategic Policy Coordinator – Coordinatrice de la politique stratégique

Nature's Trust of New Brunswick, Saint John, New Brunswick

We have been very happy with our partnership with the Loran Scholars Foundation, and grateful for the wonderfully inquisitive students that the program supports. In the past, interns have assisted in our advocacy/policy projects, including stronger wetland protection, violations on New Brunswick's Species at Risk Act, and local government reform and implications. In addition, depending on their interests, they have worked on Landowner Stewardship program outreach, Design, and developing an Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion strategy. We enjoy helping interns grow their interests and develop new skills. It is very helpful to have staff that think critically and are dedicated to creating an impact at the Nature Trust, and in turn, the world of land conservation.

ENTERPRISE

Lynden Evers ('12), Compliance Manager & Business Analyst

Advantage Capital Strategies, Toronto, Ontario

"We have been fortunate to work with Loran Scholars for the past six years. As a Socially Responsible Investment Management firm, the perspectives and energy that each of the scholars have brought has been highly valuable, both to our business and our research process.

There is a common thread among the scholars, where they are not afraid to question the status quo, while also making sure that they pursue practical and actionable outcomes. The Loran Scholars we've worked with are all highly professional, eager, curious, and intelligent, which has allowed them to quickly adapt and contribute to our business. We are grateful to be working with such competent and ethical students in the Loran Scholars program."

Loran Volunteers make a difference

Eyob Naizghi Retired Executive Director Vancouver, BC

For Eyob Naizghi, Loran's story resonates with his own. As a refugee student, he was sponsored to come to Canada and pursue graduate studies at the University of British Columbia. Had it not been for the WUSC Refugee Scholarship, "I would not be where I am today," he shares. "For me, volunteering for Loran is giving back, in a very small way, what I have received over the years."

Eyob enthusiastically shares Loran's core values, and has dedicated his career to service and leadership at MOSAIC, an organization supporting refugee and immigrant communities. Now a selections volunteer, as well as a mentor for a current scholar, he is impressed with the compassion and dedication he sees in the young people he meets through Loran. "I'm always waiting with anticipation to meet the students each year," he adds. "I have great hope that Canada's future, in their hands — with the support they receive from Loran — is in a better place."

As a Loran interviewer for the last two years, he was impressed to observe that "these young people didn't stay idle during the pandemic," despite the challenges they faced, and in many ways "came out stronger." Eyob attributes this to their strength of character. Loran's program and the community that surrounds it, he emphasizes, give deserving youth a strong foundation to become future leaders — which he believes is needed now more than ever.

"Everyone deserves a hand up," Eyob affirms. For that reason, "Loran will always have a place in Canada, and in my heart."

 792 individuals volunteer with the Foundation

 489 selections donate over 8,800 hours to select each class of Loran Scholars

 Loran alumni make up 34% of Loran's total volunteer network

We are grateful for the hundreds of people who dedicate their time and talents to finding high-potential students and helping them reach their potential. Our network of volunteers assess and interview candidates, support scholars as mentors and coaches, and serve on our board. These volunteers come from a variety of careers, backgrounds, and locations, and model the very values we look for in Loran Scholars.

For their generosity and service, we thank and celebrate the 792 individuals who collectively gave over 14,500 hours of their time in 2021-2022. Their belief in our mission makes it possible for us to invest each year in young Canadians who demonstrate the potential to become leaders of integrity.

Every effort is made to ensure the accuracy of this report. If, however, we have made any errors or omitted a name, please accept our sincere apologies and contact info@loranscholar.ca for corrections.

As champions of education, Rod and Robin MacLennan have been long-time supporters of Loran since its early days. Recruited by founder Bob Cluett to join the original Halifax selection committee for what would become the Loran Award, Rod — who had been chairman of the Nova Scotia Royal Commission on Post-Secondary Education — was impressed with the program. He and Robin have been involved ever since.

For nearly 25 years, the MacLennans have been generously investing in Loran Scholars as donors, helping the community to grow and flourish. “One of Loran’s strengths is its intensive, unique selection process,” says Rod. “The fact that it searches for youth who are willing to take risks, who have more than just high academic standards, who take on service and leadership opportunities — that separates Loran from other scholarship programs.” He is also delighted by Loran’s role in retaining talented young people who can stay in Canada during and beyond their studies: “I think there is a strong Canadian element that’s part of the Loran story.”

The MacLennans’ legacy of giving is distinguished by its consistency. They continue contributing financially after so many years because, in their words, “the investment pays off long-term.” From their perspectives as donors — as well as volunteers supporting Loran’s selections, mentorship program, and governance — Rod and Robin are pleased to witness the increasing impact that Loran alumni are having in their fields and communities.

With that real-world impact in view, the MacLennans are confident that Loran’s mission will endure. To them, it’s a simple reason why they show their support (and recruit others to join them): “Loran has a good thing going.”

OUR PARTNERS INVESTING IN POTENTIAL

Each year, the Loran Scholars Foundation benefits from the support of hundreds of individuals, companies, and foundations aligned with our mission of investing in young people who demonstrate character, service, and leadership potential. We thank those listed below for their financial contributions in support of our mission.

^A denotes a donor who also gave travel miles to mitigate future travel costs.

^M indicates a monthly donor.

Every effort is made to ensure the accuracy of this report. If, however, we have made any errors or omitted a name, please accept our sincere apologies and contact info@loranscholar.ca for corrections.

ENDOWMENT GIVING (cumulative to 30 April 2022)

The Loran Scholars Foundation established an endowment fund in 2008 to provide our donors with a means of making an enduring gift in support of promising young Canadians. One of our long-term goals is to fund a proportion of our annual expenditures from income earned on invested capital. As an organization, we are committed to contributing to this endowment as well, from our net surplus, to invest in our future financial stability as a foundation. The fund, holding $14.4M as of April 30, 2022 is managed by Burgundy Asset Management and overseen by a volunteer committee struck by our board of directors.

FINANCIALS

Loran has grown its asset base with a primary aim of ensuring that the Foundation has sufficient funds to meet its future obligations to all in-stream scholars and can continue to meet its goals to increase funding opportunities for exceptional students each year. To help achieve this, our investment funds are professionally managed in a balanced portfolio.

We encourage you to review our audited financial statements, available at www.loranscholar.ca. Below is summarized financial information for the year ended April 30, 2022.

We're in search of young Canadians with integrity, compassion, and courage — the future community helpers, movement makers, and civic-minded risk-takers.

We work to identify and support talented students who show sparks of leadership potential and strong commitment to service.

Together with our volunteers, donors, and Canadian university partners, we are investing in our collective future.
